PREFACE.

A preface has been likened to "a visit of ceremony with half an excuse for not calling sooner, and half an apology for calling at all."

Be this as it may, for various reasons, a preface seems an absolute necessity in a work of this kind.

Moncure D. Conway says, "in the last generation young people who betrayed any interest in their ancestors were apt to be snubbed, and old family papers were abandoned to the mice, but gradually interest in genealogy has crept back."

Well it is that this is so, for family history is often most interesting and inspiring. Unfortunately, the records of many old families have been neglected, lost, or destroyed; in this respect the Woodhull family has been particularly fortunate. Time-stained ancient records, old wills and deeds, as well as many printed references both in England and America, have furnished valuable material for this family history.

The English references marked "In British Museum" were all examined by Mr. Rufus King, the well known Genealogist of Yonkers, New York. With the exception of the above, and six or eight others the references, included in both parts of the Woodhull Genealogy, are the result of personal effort on the part of the authors of this Volume.

Thanks are due to all of the Woodhull name or descent, who have furnished information, corrected doubtful data and aided in gathering material necessary for a work of this character.

Those who have gone beyond this, we feel, are justly entitled to personal mention, viz.: Mr. Josiah Townsend Woodhull, Vice-President of the Frost National Bank, of San Antonio, Texas; Mrs. Oliver Jones Woodhull, of the same city; John Francis Woodhull, Ph. D., of Columbia University; Colonel Alfred Alexander Woodhull, M. D., of Princeton University; Mr. Richard Lawrence Woodhull, of Setauket, Long Island; Mr. Lambert Woodhull, of Dayton, Ohio; Thenford Woodhull, Esq., of Brooklyn, New York, and Mr. Jesse Calvin Woodhull, of the same city. Mrs. Benjamin Dorrance, of Dorranceton, Pa.; Miss Helen Woodhull Hazlett, of Bangor, Maine, for valuable work done in the Library of Congress; Miss Annie Mulford, of Patchogue, Long Island; Mrs. Gardner Blanchard Perry, of Newport, Rhode Island; Mr. Samuel Hopkins, of Miller's Place, Long Island; Mr. Nathaniel Woodhull Foster, President of the Suffolk County Historical Society, of Riverhead, Long Island; Mr. Richard Lawrence, of New York City; the Hon. Joseph Church Helm, of Denver, Colorado, and Mr. and Mrs. William Hay Auld, of Essex, Ontario.

Grateful acknowledgments are also gladly rendered to the following persons outside the family: Mr. Rufus King, of Yonkers, New York; Mr. Orville B. Ackerly, of the same city; Mr. Silas D. Paine, of New York City; Rev. George B. Carr, D. D., of Lincoln University; Miss Agnes Patton, and Miss Katherine Harrison Browne, of Philadelphia, Pa.

To Mr. George Maurice Abbot, of the Philadelphia Library, and the courteous assistants both there and at the Ridgway Branch.

To Mr. John W. Jordan and the helpful assistants of the Pennsylvania Historical Society, and to the Presbyterian Historical Society of Philadelphia, Pa., the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, and the Librarian of Congress.

PART FIRST.

NORMANDY AND FLANDERS IN THE CONQUEST.

It has been said that Normandy and Flanders, in the olden days of chivalry, kept almost side by side in dignity, prosperity and prowess.

History tells us that Matilda of Flanders, and her brave Knights, many of whom were Noblemen of high degree, joined William of Normandy in his great undertaking in 1066, and in return, Flanders, as well as Normandy, was richly rewarded with castles and lands in newly conquered England.

Among the names which occur in the lists of the Conquerors of England, may be found those of "Gerbod," a son of Matilda by her first husband, "Gilbert of Ghent," and "Walter of Flanders." (See "History of the Norman People," by Edward A. Freeman, Vol. III., p. 312.)

The last of the three Flemish Knights above named, was of a family derived from the Castellans of Cambray, of whom a Walter is mentioned by Baldric of Noyon, in his Chronicle, as "Lord of the Castle Lens" as early as 950 A. D.

According to Des Bois, in his "Dictionnaire de la Noblesse," his son Walter II., was constituted hereditary Castellan of Cambray, soon after the above date, who had issue: I. Walter. II. Sicher, Bishop of Cambray. III. Ada de Cambray, who married the Baron of Oissy, and had issue Walter III., Castellan of Cambray in 1049.

Hugh I., son of Walter, had issue Hugh II., Viscount of Meaux, living 1096, and Faistre D'Oissy, Advocate of Tournay 1098, ancestor of the great house of Avesne.

"Walter Flanderensis or De Cambray, a younger brother, came to England 1066, and 1086 held a great Barony in Bedford, Bucks, and so forth, of which Woodhall or Wahull was the chief seat, and from him descended the barons Wahull, by Writ 1295."

(See Dugdale and Banks, "Dormant and Extinct Peerage.")

"Walter, a younger son (of the house of Cambray), accompanied the Conqueror in 1066. His descendants bore three crescents instead of one, as borne by the Castellans of Cambray."

(See Quartering One in Wodhull Achievement.)

"Walter (surnamed Flanderensis) obtained the Barony of Wahull, Bedford, which he held in 1086.

"He had issue: I. Simon, from whom descended the Barons de Wahull, by Writ 1295: II. William, father of Reiner: III. Walter, who appears in York 1120.

"Reiner Flanderensis, the son of William, founded Kirkly Priory, York. His son William Flanderensis granted lands at Wentworth to Fountains Abbey.

"William de Wentworth (or De Oissy, or De Cambray) married the heiress of Woodhouse. Hence came the great and unfortunate Earl of Stafford."

(See "Norman People and Their Descendants.")

THE CROWN COMMISSIONER, OR DOMESDAY BOOK.

As is well known, after the Conquest, the Norman William bestowed vast estates upon his faithful Knights, and followers, taking the wise precaution, however, to scatter said estates over the newly acquired possessions in such a way as to make impossible any united effort, or uprising, between the different owners of the land.

Every several manor was taxed with "customs" which were forthwith turned over to the royal treasury, and the Crown Commissioner, or Domesday Book was specially created to keep the records of these "customs."

Herein were carefully kept the "extent and value of each estate, the names, numbers and conditions of its inhabitants, its value before and after the Conquest, and the sum due from it to the Crown."

Says Hume, "The Domesday Book is the most valuable piece of antiquity possessed by any nation."

The first record of the de Wahulle family in England is in Domesday Book, where may be found the records of Walter Flandrensis, who held as feudal lord estates in Bedfordshire, Northamptonshire and Buckinghamshire.

The following excerpt is from "Domesday Book The Portion relating to Northampton, Extended and Translated," by Stuart A. Moore. (See pp. 31-32, for XXXIX., Walter Flandrensis (otherwise called Walter de Wahulle) who held land in Pipewell in Rodewelle Hundred; Cottesbrook in Gisleburg Hundred; Hanging Houghton, Lamport and Withmale in same Hundred. Pitsford and Horton, in Spelehot Hundred; Evenley and Cannon; Ashby in Tovecestre Hundred; Evenley in Otboldestov Hundred. Land pertaining to Evenly in Sutone Hundred; Cold Higham in Tovecestre Hundred; Wotton in Wimereslea Hundred. Woodland and meadow in Claile Hundred; and land for twelve ploughs in Pateshull.

(Folio 226 b, Column I. of Original Record to be seen at the Public Record Office, London, England, having been transferred thither from the Chapter House at Westminster, July 9th, 1859) according to Mr. Stuart Moore.

Attention is here called to the various rendering of the family name, "Sinonyma sunt idem significantia Wahull, Wodhull, Wodehull, Wodehill, Wodhill, Wodel, Wodil, Odell, Odill." (See "Miscellanëa Genëalogica, et Heraldica." Vol. I., Second Series, pp. 50, 78.)

In the same interesting volume is found the following:—

"Walter, baron of Wahull, sonne of Saherus, held the baron of Wahul in Bedfordshire of the King in cheife valued by year at 20 and

A° 38 H. 3. 1253, he was destrained to passe over the seas with the K. into Gascoigne, there to War with the K. of Castile.

"It appeareth by Records exemplified that Simon de Wahull gave certaine landes in Woodhull (here oddly enough the spelling is the same as is in use to-day) to the prior and hospitall of Jerusalem in the days of John.

"John, Baron of Wodhull, sonne of Walter was sum'oned amonge other Barons and Peeres of ye Realm in ye 5 yeare of King Edward I. to be readie with his horse and armor to enter Wales with the King to suppress Leweline prince of Wales, then rebellinge who at that acknowledge ye seruice of 3 Kts. fees for his Baronie of Wodhull."

SEATS AND FAMILY ESTATES.

I. Wahull Castle—Co.: Bedford vide Domesday Book:

"The River Ouse runs under Wodhull, formerly Wayhul—which also has its Barons of Wayhul, eminent for their ancient nobility—where was a Castle whose Barony consisted of 300 Knights Fees in divers Counties." (See Camden's "Britannia," p. 286.)

Also, in Anthony Lower's "Family Names of Great Britain" is the following: "Wahull—The Seat of an Ancient Barony—The great Domesday Baron, known as Walter Flanderensis, from his being a Fleming held it, his family were called De Wahulls."

In Lyson's "Magna Brittania," Vol. I., p. 10, is the statement: "Walter Flanderensis (ancestor of the barons Wahul) had five manors in the County of Bedford. The chief seat of the Wahuls, was at Wodhull, or Odell Castle."

II. Pateshull Manor—Co.: Northampton vide Domesday Book: "Simon, 2nd, Baron de Wahull, gave moiety of Pateshull Church to Godston Priory temp. Henry I. or Stephen." (See Leland's "Itinerary.")

III. Langford Manor—Co.: Bedford vide Domesday Book: "This Manor was parcel of the Barony of Wahull, and continued in possession of the family of the Wahulls or Wodhulls, Lords of the Barony till the reign of Edward IV. (1461.)

IV. Segenhoe—Co.: Bedford vide Domesday Book: At the time of the Norman Survey 1081, parcels of the Barony of Wahull. There was anciently a Castle at Segenhoe which existed as late as the year 1276, possibly a seat of the Barons Wahull. It is mentioned in the "Chronicle of Dunstaple Priory." 1276.

V. Bragborough Manor—Co.: Northampton—vide Domesday Book:

"The Manor of Bragsborough in this parcel was at the time of the Norman Survey, 1081, and long afterwards, parcel of the Barony of Wahull."

VI. Shortgrove Manor—Co.: Essex.

VII. Dunstaple Priory—Co.: Bedford vide Dugdale's "Monasticom Anglicanum."

VIII. Langport Manor—Co.: Northampton A. D. 1186.

IX. Warkworth Castle—Co.: Northampton.

(Through intermarriage with Elizabeth, heir of her brother, Thomas Chetwode, about 1409.)

X. Chetwode Manor—Co.: Buckinghamshire.

(Through Elizabeth Chetwode, about 1409.)

XI. Thenford Manor—Co.: Northampton.

"Purchased by Foulke, 22nd, Baron Wahull, about 1508."

XII. Holdenby's Manor—Co.: Northampton A. D. 1548.

XIII. Wappenham Manor: purchased by John Wodhull, Esq., of Valentine Knightley, A. D. 1742.

So interesting is the description from "Bibliographa Topographa Brittanica," Vol. IV., it is given in full:

"Odell, Woodhulle and formerly Wahul. The name of this village is from its situation Woodhull or Woodhill from the hill and fine wood near it.

"It seems to be a very old and proper name for formerly it had belonged to Barons of Wahull, eminent for their ancient nobility, whose baronies consisted (says D. Holland) of 300 Knights fees.

"The Castle must have been an impregnable fortress from its advantageous situation near the river and on a rock of Considerable height and steep ascent.

"Little remains of the old Works yet both the upper and base Court are very Conspicuous. The only habitable building is where stood the ——— on an area of half an acre * * * particularly the South fort 105 feet long.

"Among the paintings mentioned in Odell Castle were the following: 1. Thomas, Lord Crewe; 2. His Lady; 3. Thomas, Lord Crewe on Copper by Sir Peter Lely; 4. Several other family portraits, as Crewe Bishop of Durham."

Also in "Magna Brittania," Vol. I., p. 121, we find the following bit of ancient history.

"Odell, in the hundred of Willey and deanery of Clopham, on the river Ouse, ten miles northwest of Bedford on the borders of Northamptonshire."

Leland, who visited Bedfordshire in the reign of Henry VIII., describes Odell Castle, or "Great Woodhull" Castle as "strange ruins belonging to Lord Bray."

Says Lyson, "It seems difficult to reconcile this with its descent from the Lords Wahul, to the Chetwodes, which is proved by various records. The family of Wahul continued in the male line as Lords Wahul till the time of Henry VIII., when the heir female of Anthony titular Lord Wahul, married Richard Chetwode, Esq., of Oakley in Staffordshire."

An older record says, "Odell Castle stands on an eminence and commands a beautiful view of the river Ouse, and the adjacent country, very little remains of the old building.

"The Manor of Little Odell (probably in close proximity to Odell) was at the time of the Norman Survey part of the estate of Eustace Earl of Bouloigne, but was sometime afterwards annexed to the Barony of Woodhull."

THE DE WAHULL PEERAGE.

The following is taken from Sir Bernard Burke's "Dormant, Abeyant, Forfeited and Extinct Peerages." (New edition, London, 1883.)

"Wahull—Barons De Wahull. By Writ of summons, dated 26, Jan., 1297.

Walter De Flanders came into England with the Conqueror and held as feudal lord, at the time of the General Survey, considerable estates in the counties of Bedford and Northampton, of which Wahull (now Wodhull) in the former shire, was the head of the barony.

To this Walter succeeded. Walter De Wahull, whose son Simon De Wahull, in the time of King Henry I., or Stephen, with Sibyll, his wife, gave the church of Langford to the Knights Templars.

His son and successor, Walter De Wahull, certified, in the 12th year of the reign of Henry II. (1165) on the assessment of the aid for marrying the King's daughter, his knight's fees to be twenty-seven and three. He was later concerned in the insurrection of Robert, Earl of Leicester, and was made prisoner in a battle near St. Edmundsbury. By his first wife, Albreda, widow of Guy de St. Valery, Walter De Wahull had no issue, but by Roesia, his second wife, he had two daughters and two sons, Simon and John.

His successor Simon De Wahull was fined in the 22nd year of Henry II. (1175) for trespassing in the King's forests. In the 16th year of King Richard I. (1194) he paid 27 pounds toward the sum levied for the King's redemption.

This Simon gave to the Nuns at the Convent of Godstone, where his two daughters Mary and Cicely had entered, a moiety of the church of Pateshull in Northamptonshire. He died two years later when Henry, Archbishop of Canterbury, paid 333 pounds, 6 shillings, 8 pence for the wardship of his heir, which was John De Wahull.

This feudal lord died in 1216, leaving his sisters his heirs, viz. Roesia, married to Robert L'Isle; and Agnes, who was married first to Robert de Bassingham, and secondly to William Fitz-Warrine, but neither sister appears to have had any surviving issue, and the honor of Wahull devolved upon the heir male of the family, Saiher De Wahull, son of John's uncle who died in 1250 and was succeeded by his son, Walter De Wahull, who upon doing his homage and giving security to pay 100 pounds for his relief, had living of the honor of Wahull, and the other lands of his inheritance.

He married Helewyse, daughter of Hugh de Vivon, and died in the year 1269, and was succeeded by his son, John De Wahull, who attained his majority in the next year. In the 22nd, year of Edward I. reign (1293) he had a military summons to march into Gascony, and also to proceed against the Welsh. He married Agnes, daughter of Henry Pinkeney, and dying in 1295 was succeeded by his son, Thomas De Wahull.

This feudal lord was summoned to Parliament as a Baron, 26, Jan. 1297, in the 25th, year of Edward I. He died in 1304 seized of the Barony of Wahull, as also of the Manor of Wahull in County Bedford, and Pateshull in Northamptonshire, leaving by his wife Hawise, daughter of Henry Praers, an infant son and heir John De Wahull, who although possessing the honors of Wahull had no similar summons to Parliament, nor had any of his descendants.

He died in the 10th, year of the reign of Edward III. (1337), leaving by Isabella, his wife, two sons, first John (Sir) whose line terminated in heiresses, his granddaughters, Elizabeth and Eleanor, who both d. s. p.

Nicholas, the second son (or his son) upon the termination of the elder Sir John De Wahull, succeeded to the estate and became Nicholas De Wahull of Wahull. He married Margaret, daughter of John Foxcote, Esq., and had issue, Thomas, his successor; Richard, Edith, who married Emesworth, and Margaret who married Simon Brown.

He died in the 12th, year of Henry IV. (1411), and was succeeded by his eldest son Thomas De Wahull, who married Elizabeth sister and heir of Sir Thomas Chetwode Kt. and had two sons, Thomas and William. He died in the 9th, year of the reign of Henry V., and was succeeded by Thomas De Wahull, who married Isabel, eldest daughter of Sir William Trussell, of Elmesthorp, and had issue, John, Thomas and Isabel who married Bowden.

He was succeeded by his eldest son John De Wahull or Wodhull who married Jean, daughter of Henry Etwell, of London, and had four sons, Fulk, Thomas, William and John, and three daughters, Elizabeth, Anne and Mary.

He was succeeded by his eldest son, Fulk Wodhull, who married Anne, daughter and heir of William Newenham, of Thenford, Northamptonshire (by Margaret, his wife, one of the daughters and co-heirs of Thomas Lamport) and had issue, Nicholas, his successor, Thomas, Lawrence of Molington, County Warwick, Mary, who married Edward Cope, Esq., and Isabel, who married Richard Tresham, Esq., of Newton, Northamptonshire.

Fulk Wodhull died in the 24th, year of the reign of Henry VII. (1508), and was succeeded by his eldest son, Sir Nicholas Wodhull Knight. He married for his first wife, Mary, daughter of Richard Raleigh, Esq., of Farnborough, County Warwick, and had issue, Anthony, Barbara, who married Edmund Medwinter, Esq., and Joice.

For his second wife, Sir Nicholas married Elizabeth, daughter, and co-heir of Sir William Parr, Lord Parr of Horton (of whom more later), and had Fulk, who married Alice, daughter of William Collis, Esq., of Leigh, County Worcester, and who was the ancestor of the Wodhulls of Thenford, Northamptonshire. Anne, his daughter, married David Seamour, Esq., Mary married Richard Burnaby, Esq., of Watford, Northamptonshire.

Sir Nicholas died in the 23rd, year of the reign of Henry VIII. (1532), and was succeeded by his eldest son Anthony Wodhull, who coming of age in the 31st, year of the same reign (1540), had livery on his lands, but died two years after, and left by Anne, daughter of Sir John Smith, an only daughter and heiress, Agnes, who married first, Richard Chetwode, Esq. (3rd, son of Roger Chetwode, Esq., of Oakley, by Ellen Masterton his wife), and had a son and heir, Richard Chetwode, of whom presently. Alice married secondly, Sir George Calverly Knight, and had two sons, who died before her.

Lady Calverly was succeeded in the 18th, year of Queen Elizabeth's reign (1576) by her only son, Sir Richard Chetwode, who in the reign of James I. (1603) preferred a claim to the Barony of Wahull or Wodhull (as possessor of the Manor and Castle of Odell, or Wodhull), his petition being referred to the Duke of Lennox, the Lord Howard, and the Earl of Nottingham, these noblemen returned the following certificate:—

"According to your Majesty's direction, we have met and considered the petition of Sir Richard Chetwode, and find that before any usual calling of barons by writs, his ancestors were barons in their own right, and were summoned to serve the Kings in their wars with other barons, and were also summoned to Parliament.

"And we conceive the discontinuance to have arisen from the lord of the honour dying at one year of age, and the troubles of the times ensuing, but still the title of baron was allowed in all the reigns by conveyance of their estates and by pardon of alienation from the crown by the King's own officers and 9 pounds a year, per annum, being the ancient fee for the castle guard of Rockingham, was constantly paid, and is paid to this day, so that though there has been a disuse, yet the right so fully appearing, which cannot die, we have not seen or heard of any one so much to be regarded in grace, and in consideration of so many Knights fees, from the very time of the Conquest, and by him held this day, and a pedigree both on the father and mother's side, proved by authentic records from the time of the Conquest (which in such cases are very rare) we hold him, worthy of the honor of a baron, if your Majesty thinks meet."

HOWARD,
NOTTINGHAM.

The King offered to make Sir Richard Chetwode Baron of Wodhull by patent, according to Sir Bernard Burke, "but that gentleman," says the writer upon the Peerage, "considered the offer derogatory and declined.'

It seems scarcely likely that Sir Richard would purchase what was his birthright from his mother, Agnes, eldest daughter and heir of Sir Anthony Wodhull.

In the first paragraph of the certificate signed by the Duke of Lennox, Lord Howard and the Earl of Nottingham, they used the term "barons in their own right," and declared the de Wahulls possessed said right. The following explanation of the term is given in Dugdale's "Baronage," Vol. I., page 79:—

"The celebrated Earl Warrine (or Warren) upon being asked (after the Conqueror's time) concerning his right to the estates in his possession (which were many) drew his sword and declared that William (the Conqueror) did not secure the Kingdom by himself alone, but that the barons, his ancestors among them were joint adventurers in the enterprise."

AN ALLIANCE OF NOTE.

As before stated, Sir Nicholas Wodhull married Elizabeth, daughter and co-heir of Sir William Parr, of Horton, who was uncle and Chamberlain to Queen Katherine Parr, last wife of Henry VIII.

Sir William Parr was created Lord Parr 1539, Marquis of Northampton 1547, styled Lord Marmion and Lord St. Quentin 1550. (See "The Ancestor," number IV., pp. 15 and 16, January, 1903.)

Elizabeth Parr was a descendant of William the Conqueror through his youngest daughter Gundred. (See Ockerby's "Book of Dignities") for the following:

"Born of the Norman Line, Issue of William I. Gundred married to William Earl of Warren and Surrey." (See also extract from Charles Browning's "Americans of Royal Descent," Genealogical Appendix, Part II., note A.)

Elizabeth Parr brought quarterings 8 to 18 by inheritance from her father, her grandfather, and her mother. She was also a descendant of Edward I., and William the Lion of Scotland.

WODHULLS IN NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

According to one account, the Estate of Thenford came into the Wodhull family in the time of Henry VII. (1485). Another says:

"Fulk Wodhull gent, lord of Langford and Somerton Manors bought the Manor of Thenford Aug. 7th, Elizabeth's reign (1565)."

Nicholas Wodhull, great-great grandson of Thomas and Elizabeth Chetwode, by will dated 22nd March, in the 22nd year of the reign of Henry VIII. (1531) "bequeathed his body to be buried in the Chapel of our Lady, in church of Warkworth, and directed his executors to provide an honest priest of good conversation with a yearly salary of 8 marks (£5. 6s. 8d.) to say and sing masses for his soul and the souls of his father and mother for 12 years.

"He also bequeathed £10 toward rebuilding the steeple, a gown of black satin to make a cope thereof, and his wife's apparel to be made into vestments and other ornaments to the honour of God and said church.

"He died in May falling seized of the Manor of Warkworth, held by the Bishop of Lincoln, as of his Manor of Banbury, leaving Anthony Wodhull his son and heir aged 14, after whose decease it returned into the family of Agnes, daughter and heir, with Richard Chetwode, Esq.

"She died 1585 succeeded by her son Sir Richard Chetwode, who in 1659 conjointly with his son Richard, sold the Manor of Warkworth, with another estate, to Philip Holman, Esq., for £14.000."

On page 741 Baker's "History of Northampton," is found the following: "In Warkworth Castle gallery, are arms, quarterings and crests of several of the nobility of England.

"The arms and quarterings of Crewe were seen on a stone dated 1592. 1st, Chetwode, 2nd, Crewe, 3rd, Sounds, 4th, Reys, 5th, Rowley or Raleigh, 6th, Henhull, 7th, Woodhull, 8th, Oakley, 9th, Chetty, 10th, a fess (Ermine) in chief three leopards' heads, 11th, Lyons, 12th, Newnenham."

A number of years ago Warkworth Castle was burned to the ground, Odell or Great Wodhull Castle has been in ruins for many years, but Thenford Manor with its ancient chapel still remain.

The Estate of Thenford, near Banbury Cross and nearer Middleton, in the County of Northamptonshire, is a noble one.

In the reign of Henry VIII. Nicholas Wodhull, son and heir of Fulk Wodhull, devised Thenford to Fulk Wodhull, Esq., his eldest son by his second wife, Elizabeth Parr, daughter and heir of Sir William Parr, of Horton, and it continued in the Wodhull family down to the extinction of the line upon the death of Michael Wodhull, Esq. (1815).

(The manner in which it passed out of the family and name will be related further on.)

THE ANCIENT CHURCH AT THENFORD.

The English Chronicler Morton says, "The Church at Thengford (or Thenford) was perhaps built upon a burial place of the Romans, for in digging a grave in the churchyard was found an urn containing ashes, and also a medal of the Emperor Constans, as the worshipful J. Wodhull, Esq., of Thengford, has informed me."

Four miles east of Banbury, Northamptonshire, stands the small church of St. Mary's. Its architecture is chiefly of the XIV. century, very good work, with some portions of an earlier date, and a Tower of the XV. Century at the West end.

The nave has on the North side two plain obtusely-pointed arches on massive octagon pillars, with plain Capitals, probably semi-Norman; on the South side are two obtusely-pointed arches, also plain, with octagon pillars the Capitals of which have the Norman abacus and stiff leaf foliage.

The windows of the Clerestory are of the XIV., and the roof of the XV. Century. Both the aisles are of the XIV. Century; with Decorated windows, two of these on the North side have very good corbels to the inner arches of the window, and beautiful Decorated foliage.

The Chancel is of the early part of the XIV. Century; with a fine East window of three lights foliated. The South door is plain, late Norman work. There is a good Screen of open wood-work, which appears to be mostly of the XV. Century. The church contains some fine windows of ancient stained glass.

There is a Jacobean monument with effigy, assigned to Fulk Wodhull, who died 1613, and who was Lord of Thenford Manor in the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and King James I.

This monument is under the upper window of the North aisle. It is of freestone, having the cornice supported by four half pillars.

Upon the tomb is the figure of an armed man, in trunk-breeches, with his head upon two pillows, his hands in a praying posture.

"In the Church Tower are five bells with the following inscriptions:

No. I. "Michael Wodhull, benefactor 1731."
" II. "William Ring, Church-Warden 1731."
" III. "Edward Hemins fect 1731 W: R: C: W:"
" IV. "Prayes the Lord 1601." (In raised letters.)
" V. (Tenor) "John Briant, Hereford, fecit 1806. C. Howard and J. Law, C. W. E. Stafford Vicar."

Nos. I., II. and III. were evidently all made by the same founder.

"The Pulpit is new with a band of good Decorated carved oak work round it near the top with medallions of Faith, Hope and Charity and other allegorical figures below it.

"Under the Tower are some fragments of Dec: oak work, another Wodhull stone and an ancient oak post, bearing the Wodhull coat of arms, formerly called the "pump stock," which stood in the West of the church and was for safe keeping of the parish deeds and so forth. It has a good lid and has also possibly, been used as an almsbox."

(NOTE.—It will be readily seen at a glance that the foregoing copy of the Parish Register contains no records of christenings in the Wodhull family between the years 1604 and 1629.

This may or may not be the result of willful tampering with said records, but tradition has it, and it is believed by those best qualified to judge, that some of the records are undoubtedly missing.

In any event, the record of the birth of Richard Wodhull, the progenitor of the family in America, is apparently not in existence. Be this as it may, all accounts of him in ancient family papers, and through family history, agree that he was born at Thenford, Northamptonshire, England, September 13, 1620.)

SOME MAGNA CHARTA BARONS.

According to Blackstone, the title of Baron is of great antiquity. He says, "The most probable opinion seems to be, that they were the same with our present Lords of Manors."

On July 15, 1215, at Runnymede, between Stains and Windsor, a momentous conference took place between King John and the barons of England. To quote S. M. Johnson:

"Thus by a great rebellion of the barons, England's worst and weakest Monarch was compelled to grant a charter which declared rebellion lawful and provided means for lawfully conducting."

In one day the Magna Charta "that earliest monument of English freedom" was drawn up signed and sealed, and the liberty of the English people assured forever.

Among the barons most determined to obtain this longed for freedom, was the influential Eustace De Vesci, whose name is in the Covenant of Security.

Henry Knighton, a Canon-regular of Leicester Abbey who lived in the time of Richard II., asserts that Eustace De Vesci married a very beautiful woman—Margaret, daughter of William (the Lion), King of Scotland, whom De Vesci kept away from the Court, as it appears King John had become enamored of her.

As this baron was "an inveterate enemy of the King and a principal leader in the insurrection," the story seems quite probable.

Brief notice of the Wodhull ancestor Robert de Ros, who married Isabel, the Scottish princess: There were two sons, William and Robert. William de Ros second baron was one of the competitors for the Crown of Scotland in the 19th, year of Edward I., through his grandmother Isabel, daughter of William the Lion.

Robert de Ros and Eustace de Vesci are in the list of the twenty-five sureties of the Magna Charta and are the lineal ancestors of the founders of the Order of Runneymede. (See Browning's "Magna Charta Barons And Their Descendants," page 60.)

The following very interesting and valuable account is taken entire from Browning's book, "The Magna Charta Barons":

Vesci—Barons Vesci.

By writ of summons dated 29th December, 1264.

Lineage.

Among the most valiant of the Norman Nobility in the train of the Conqueror were Robert De Vesci, who possessed at the General Survey the lordship of Badebrock in Northamptonshire with divers other estates in the counties of Warwick, Lincoln and Leicester.

Yvo De Vesci, upon whom King William (the Conqueror) bestowed in marriage Ada, only daughter and heiress of William Tyson, Lord of Alnwick, in Northumberland, and Malton in Hastings.

By this great heiress Yvo had an only daughter and heir, Beatrice De Vesci, who married Eustace Fitz-Joan (or John) Lord of Knaresborough in Yorkshire, and had two sons (their father Eustace Fitz-John was nephew and heir of Serlo de Burgh, of the great family of Burgh).

The eldest son of Beatrice having inherited the great possessions of his mother's family, assumed its surname and became William De Vesci.

He espoused Burga, sister of Robert de Stutevil, by whom he had two sons, Eustace his successor upon attaining his majority in the second year of Richard I. (Cœur de Lion) gave two thousand three hundred marks for livery of his lands, with liberty to marry whom he pleased.

Eustace De Vesci was one of the twenty-five celebrated Barons to enforce the observance of Magna Charta. He married the Scottish Princess Margaret, daughter of William and sister of Alexander Kings of Scotland, and was succeeded by his son, William De Vesci.

Eustace was slain about 1216 by an arrow from the ramparts of Balmoral Castle (belonging to Hugh de Baliol).

William De Vesci in the 10th, year of Henry III. obtained livery of his lands as well as the Castle of Alnwick. By his first wife he had no issue. His second wife (by whom he had issue) was Agnes, daughter of William de Ferrers."

ARMORIAL BEARINGS.

In by-gone days knights and nobles were known by their "shield and its blazon," and the "coat-of-arms" is still indicative of family standing and past renown, as well as being of importance to the student of history and heraldry.

In the reign of Henry V. (1413) the victorious monarch who gained Harfleur and Agincourt, was given to the "College of Arms" the task of "recording all coats of arms in existence."

In the reign of Henry IV., "Commission of Visitation" was ordered but seems not to have been carried out successfully until the reign of Henry VIII. From this period "Visitations" have been made about every thirty years, and have proved of great interest and value to lovers of heraldry and genealogy.

THE WODHULL ACHIEVEMENT.

The following interesting relation is taken from the "New York Genealogical and Biographical Record" (October, 1870).

"It is now proposed, to give an account of a remarkable heraldic painting in the possession of Richard Woodhull, Esq., of Setauket, Brookhaven, Suffolk Co., New York. This, which is an achievement of eighteen quarterings, was probably sent out from England in or about the year 1687 to Richard Wodhull, who had come from Thenford Manor in Northamptonshire and settled in Brookhaven a few years previously. (He was in America in the year 1648)."

"Most of the heiresses are representatives of baronial houses, many of them co-heiresses whose sisters have carried the same quarterings into the noblest families of England.

"Lady Alice Neville was descended on the side of both father and mother from King Edward I. An ancestor of Robert de Ros of Werke, married Isabel, daughter of William the Lion King of Scotland, and Margaret, Lady de Ros, was descended from the great Earl of Warren, whose wife Gundred, was the youngest daughter of William the Conqueror.

Eighteen quarterings 5.5.4.4.

1. Or three crescents gules, for Wodhull.
2. Argent on a cross azure, five escallops or, for Foxcote.
3. Quarterly argent and gules, five crosses pattée counterchanged, for Chetwode.
4. Or fretty sable, a bar ermine; on a chief gules, three leopards' faces gold, for Sounde.
5. Or a fess between three lozenges gules, for Hocliffe or Hokelay.
6. Argent a lyon rampant gules, for De Lyon.
7. Argent a cross gules surmounted of a bend azure, for Newenham.
8. Argent two bars azure within a bordure engrailed sable, for Parr.

9. Or three water bougets sable, for Ros.
10. Argent a saltièr gules fretty or, for Clophull.
11. Or a fret gules, for Verdon.

15. Barry of six argent and azure on a bend gules three martlets or, for Grey.
16. Vair a fess gules, for Marmion.
17. Or three chevrons gules a chief vair, for St. Quinton.
18. Gules a lyon rampant or between three crescents argent, for Salusbury.

The shield is borne upon a mantle (not mantling) gules lined with ermine.

The crest is out of a ducal coronet or a pair of wings endorsed gules.

There was no Motto, but the one used by most of the family for many years is "Sequor nec Inferior." This was the motto of the Crewe family.

In Blayde's "Visitation of Bedfordshire," pages 6, 7, 68 and 69, may be found, "All the coats belonging to the families in the Pedigrees of the Wahulls or Wodhulls."

In an "ancient roll printed in the Parliamentary Writs," Francis Palgrave found the following extract, "Sire—De Wahulle de or a cressanz de goules."

The following is a list of those who married in the Wodhull and Chetwode families:

Beresford, Braybroke, Bulkeley, Chetwode, Crewe, Cotes, Drucy, Etwall, Fitzpeter, Fitzwarren, Foxcote, Grene, Griffin, Hanky, Henhull, Kneseworth, Knighteley, Langworth, Leech, Lewson, Lions, Ludsup, Masterton, Needham, Okeley, Parre, Praers, Ragon, Raleigh, Ree, Rowley, Skevington, Smythe, Tracy, Tresham, Vivonia, Wideville.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF MICHAEL WODHULL, ESQ.

The late Michael Wodhull, Esq., "a gentleman of liberal principles, great benevolence, and extensive learning," was born in August, 1740, at Thenford, in Northamptonshire.

He attended the school of the Rev. William Cleaver, two of whose sons became Bishop of Asaph and Archbishop of Dublin, and the third a student of Christ Church, Oxford. All three were warmly attached to Michael Wodhull throughout life.

From Twyford, he went to Winchester school, thence to Brasenose, Oxford. In 1761 he married a lady of ancient family, Caroline Milcah Ingram, of Wolford, Warwickshire, a lady of great personal accomplishments and unusually beloved.

Michael Wodhull was a profound scholar "without an equal in his knowledge of French criticism and printers in the sixteenth century."

He is said to have been the first translator into English verse of all the tragedies and fragments of Euripides which are extant.

His translation of the "Medea" forms part of Volume 69 of Sir John Lubbock's "Hundred Books."

Five more of the plays in his translations are in Henry Morley's "Universal Library," Volume 58, and "Hecuba," with seven others of his renderings, are in Volume 61.

His other writings included Ode to John Cleaver, M. A. student of Christ Church, 1763. "Equality of Mankind, a Poem," 1765. For these poems see "Collection of Poetry," by Pearch (Vol. 4).

Poems revised, edited, 1804, containing a portrait of Wodhull painted by Gardiner in 1801, and engraved by E. Harding. It is reproduced in Quaritch's "Collectors." Two of his poems are in the "Poetic Register" for 1806-7 (pp. 241-4, 481-3).

He suppressed his "Ode to Criticism" which he wrote when very young, in satire of some peculiarities in Thomas Warton's poems; but Warton inserted it in "The Oxford Sausage" (1814, pp. 131-8).

Michael Wodhull also assisted in the fourth edition of Harwood's "View of the Classics" (1790), and Dibdin's "Introduction to the Classics" (3rd, edition).

He was a frequent contributor to the "Gentlemen's Magazine," usually signing himself "L. L.," the final letters of his name. He figures in the "Bibliomania" as Orlando (1876, pp. 575-7).

His library shelves contained about four thousand volumes, many of them first editions, numbers of them were bound by Roger Payne in Wodhull's "favorite Russia leather" with his arms on the cover.

"He not only bought but read his books."

In his "History of Northampton," Baker gives the following concerning Thenford Manor.

"In the hall of Thenford is a portrait of Charles I. by Vandyck. In the dining room a landscape by Zucharelli. In the South library is a whole length portrait of the late Mrs. Woodhull by Zoffani. A Queen Henrietta Maria, by Vandyck, a Venetian Nobleman, by Titian, Venus, from Titian, Ruben's wife, from Rubens, Vandyck's wives as the three Graces, by Vandyck.

"The North and South libraries are rich in ancient lore. In every volume, is the autograph of the collector, the price, date when, and the person from whom purchased."

Alexander Chalmers wrote of Michael Wodhull: "He never entered public life his chief occupation being that of a student and a collector of rare books and manuscripts.

"With the large fortune left him by his father he beautified and improved the estate. His town house was in Berkley Square, London.

"As a son, a husband, a friend, a master, few could excel him, and his charities which were numerous, were known only to those benefited.

"His practice even when infirm, was to attend service in his parish church, to read or procure some friend to read, sermons and prayers to his family and domestics every Sunday evening."

Michael Wodhull died November 10, 1816, aged seventy-seven years. By his will dated August 21, 1815, he devised Thenford and his other estates to his deceased wife's sister, Mrs. Mary Ingram, who died in 1824.

Thenford and the other estates were left by this lady to her nephew, Samuel Amy Severne, Esq. In 1886, Thenford was rented to the Graysbrooks.

The rare and valuable library collected by Michael Wodhull, Esq., was sold at auction by Mr. J. E. Severne on January 11, 15, 20, 1886. The books being dispersed among various London dealers.

The total amount of the sale was £11,972 14s. 16d. The Library of Congress in Washington, D. C., is in possession of two copies of the catalogue with the prices at which the books sold.

Woodhull Genealogy

PART SECOND

The Woodhull Family in America

A RECORD OF THE DESCENDANTS OF RICHARD WODHULL I., OF BROOKHAVEN, LONG ISLAND

1620–1904

Also, a Genealogical Appendix containing Notes of Allied Families and Biographical Sketches of Members of the Woodhull Family

INTRODUCTION TO PART SECOND.

To make the plan of our work clear, a few words of explanation are in order.

Part Second, The Woodhull Family in America, contains the Genealogical Tables, prefaced by a Biographical Sketch of Richard Wodhull I., the founder of the family in America.

The Genealogy proper, running in chronological order, according to generations, is followed by a Genealogical Appendix containing many valuable Notes regarding allied families, after which follows the Biographical Sketches in chronological order without regard to generations. An extensive reference list and the index to the Genealogical Tables finish Part Second.

Attention is called, first, to the words "Canadian Line," appended to many of the genealogical tables; all the descendants of Benjamin Woodhull and Patience Terry, of Long Island, who removed to Canada in early colonial days, are thus designated.

Second, the authors of this Genealogy must state in self defense, that in several instances dates were sent in for the same people, differing from a few days to more than two years, and nothwithstanding many months of careful labor, errors and discrepancies doubtless occur, which fact is deeply regretted, but seems impossible of rectification.

It will be noticed that each descendant of Richard Wodhull I., of the name of Richard (who was an eldest son), is designated thus: II., III., etc., throughout the entire Genealogy.

Also, those who in Colonial times filled the then important positions of Justice of the Peace, or Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, have been given the title of Hon.

As many of our subscribers are aware, John Francis Woodhull, Ph. D., of Columbia University, has in course of preparation an interesting "Woodhull Directory," which it is his hope and intention, at some future time to publish, his purpose being to re-issue, at intervals of from three to five years, a small, inexpensive Pamphlet containing births, marriages, deaths, addresses and occupations of members of the Woodhull family.

With this in view, it has not been thought necessary or advisable to add addresses, owing to the costly nature of the work, and the limited number of subscribers, the numerous Notes and Biographies having been deemed of greater interest.

A word of explanation is necessary regarding references to "Genealogy." Each of the Wodhull and Woodhull name, male and female, will be marked numerically, thus 1, 2, 3, 4, etc., etc.

The number will accompany the name when marriage brings a separate genealogical table.

The numeration in each generation, of those who married, will be according to the precedence of birth date.

In passing from the paternal genealogical table to that of a married son or daughter indicated thus "of whom later," find the number and the generation.

Family Notes and Biographical Sketches are indexed in the "Genealogical Appendix," and will be readily found.

Attention is finally called to the blank pages at the end of the Genealogy, and those who are interested in the future history of the family are urged to keep careful records of all births, marriages and deaths, which will prove of inestimable value to some future historian of the Woodhull family.

RICHARD WODHULL HOMESTEAD

At Setauket, Long Island.

The rear portion of the house is supposed to have been built in 1655.

PART SECOND.

THE WOODHULL FAMILY IN AMERICA.

The Woodhulls in America are the descendants of Richard Wodhull I., who was born, probably, at Thenford, Northamptonshire, England, September 13, 1620.

(See Benjamin F. Thompson's "History of Long Island," also "American Ancestry," and many other references.)

The date of Richard Wodhull's marriage, and his wife Deborah's surname are uncertain. The tombstones of Richard Wodhull I., and Richard Wodhull II., with those of their wives, were ruthlessly destroyed during the Revolutionary War. The original Family Bible is also missing, the oldest obtainable, being that of Richard IV., who was born in the year 1712.

It is strongly believed by some that Richard Wodhull I., married Deborah Crewe. According to Dr. Samuel Johnson, first President King's College, in a letter to his son in the year 1757, Richard Wodhull II., was "cousin german by his mother, to Lord Crewe, father of the Bishop of Durham, whose niece was mother to the present Earl of Walgrave or Waldgrave."

This seems for several reasons highly possible, but so far, it has been impossible to secure access to the private pedigrees of the Crewe family.

The Crewe motto "Sequor nec Inferior" was adopted by the Woodhull family and, as will be seen further on, the families of Crewe and Wodhull were intimately associated as friends and kinsmen.

(See Beardsley's "Life and Letters of Dr. Samuel Johnson, First President of King's College.")

The exact date of Richard Wodhull's arrival in this country is uncertain, but it was prior to April 29th, 1648, as on that date he witnessed a deed at Easthampton, Long Island.

(See Thompson's "History of Long Island," Vol. I., p. 294.)

The name of Richard Wodhull appears among the early settlers of the town of Jamaica, but he is said to have had a distaste for the policy of the Dutch Government, and hence removed to another part of the Island. He finally settled permanently at Setauket Harbor, then called Cromwell Bay, or Ashford, in the year 1656.

Mr. Richard Lawrence Woodhull (at present occupying the old family homestead at Setauket) has in his possession a Patent from Sir Edmund Andros, Colonial Governor of the Province of New York, the date of which is September 29, 1677, but in the Town Records there is an Indian deed for the land which antedates this by almost two years, the date of which is November 9, 1675.

All the family records state that he settled at Setauket, or Brookhaven in either 1655 or '56.

Benjamin F. Thompson, the celebrated historian of Long Island, was a grandson of Mary, daughter of Richard Wodhull III., who married Jonathan Thompson, of Setauket, Long Island.

In 1675, some accounts state earlier, Richard Wodhull I., purchased from the Indians 10,800 acres of land in Brookhaven, of which a portion of this original estate is still in the possession of one of his descendants in the eighth generation, the Homestead never having been occupied by any other family.

The following copy of the Indian Deed and the Release, are taken verbatim from Thompson's "Long Island."

Says Thompson:—

"This instrument is not only a very curious document, but is otherwise of sufficient importance to be preserved in the history of the town." It is in the words following:—

"KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS, that I, Gie of Setauket, Sachem, now living in Setauket, in the east riding of Yorkshire, with all my associates that have been the native proprietors of all the lands of Setauket, doth fully and absolutely ratify and confirm unto the patentees and their associates of Brookhaven, else Setauket, all those parcels of land that have been bought of any of us or our ancestors, that is to say, from the west line that runs from Stoney Brook to the North Sea, and south to the middle of the island, and so to extend to the Wading River or Red Brook, and to the middle of the island south, and so to the North Sea or Sound. I say, I Gie doth for myself and my associates, or any that have anything to do with any part or parcel of land within the line above mentioned, of all that the inhabitants have purchased, doth for ourselves, our heirs and assigns, ratify and confirm unto the inhabitants of Setauket, to them, their heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, with all the uplands, meadows, timber trees, with all harbors, creeks, ponds and fishing, fowling, hunting, with all and singular privileges, appurtenances, profits, that any way do or shall belong unto the said tract of land above mentioned, to have and to hold.

And what part or parcels of land that is within the aforesaid bounds, that is to say, from the west line of Stoney Brook to the east line of Wading River, and from thence to the middle of the island south, and to the Sound north, that is yet unpurchased, I Gie, Setauket Sachem, myself and my co-partners and associates, doth fully give unto Mr. Richard Wodhull whatsoever uplands or meadows that we apprehend is unbought by the inhabitants of Setauket, I say for some causes and considerations us moving, doth fully and absolutely give unto Mr. Richard Wodhull, sen., all the uplands and meadows, timber trees, with all and singular privileges and appurtenances, profits Whatsoever, from us, our heirs, or any that shall come after us, to him the said Richard Wodhull, to whom he shall dispose it, to him, them, and their heirs forever, to have and to hold without let or molestation, and to the full and absolute confirmation of all the above said premises, and every part of them, we do hereunto set our hands and seals, this 9th day of November 1675.

"ROBERT PHILLIPSON,

Mr. Wodhull, in a few days thereafter, released to the inhabitants of Brookhaven the interest acquired by the said purchase.

THE WODHULL RELEASE.

"To all Christian people whom this may concern. Know Ye, That I Richard Wodhull, living in Brookhaven, else Setauket, in the east riding of Yorkshire, for some valuable causes and considerations, doth assign, freely give, and make over to the inhabitants of Brookhaven, all my right and interest that is given me by Setauket Indians that is to say, both lands and meadows, timber trees, or whatsoever is expressed in the above said confirmation and bill of Gie. I, say I, Richard Wodhull, for myself, my heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, have freely given and make over all that right and title given to me by the Indians, to the inhabitants of Brookhaven, else Setauket, to them, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, to have and to hold, and to the true confirmation of the same, I do hereunto set my hand this 23rd, of November, 1675.

"RICHARD WODHULL. [L.S.]

"Signed, sealed, and delivered

"ROBERT PHILLIPSON,
"RICHARD HOWELL."

Brookhaven township in Suffolk County was the largest on Long Island, being more than three times the size of Kings County. On account of this it was divided into different settlements, though presumably not until a much later date.

On the North are Stony Brook, Drowned Meadow, or Port Jefferson, Old Man's or Mount Sinai, Miller's Place, Rocky Point or Wading River, the last being partly in the town of Riverhead.

On the South side are Mastic or Moriches, Poosepatuck, Fireplace, Bellport and Patchogue, while West are New Village, Coram, Middletown and St. George's Manor.

In by-gone days Setauket, the original settlement was the largest village in that section. Descendants of Richard Wodhull I., have lived in all, or most of the above-mentioned places.

According to B. F. Thompson and Robert Bayles, Richard Wodhull I., became proprietor in two patents of Brookhaven, Suffolk County, New York; that of Governor Richard Nicoll's in 1666, and that of Governor Thomas Dongan in 1686.

"In the early period of colonial history, he was associated with all the more important transactions of that section of the country."

(See References to Long Island in Index.)

His knowledge of surveying would alone, in those primitive days, have made him a man of great value, but beyond this he helped make the moral and religious sentiment and carry out the law.

In 1663 he represented Setauket at the General Court of Hartford, Connecticut, against the usurpation of the Dutch. In 1666 he was one of his Majesty's Justices of the Honorable Court of Assize.

In 1673 he became Deputy to the Dutch Commissioners in New York, and was by them commissioned a Magistrate for Brookhaven.

According to tradition, he was a Colonial Captain in the King's Troops in the year 1685, but in the list of Documents in the office of the Secretary of State of New York, relating to Smithtown, Long Island, Vol. XXXIII., Page 96, is the following, viz.:—"March 13, 1685, Richard Wodhull Jr. Captain."

"In the year 1687, Lord Crewe of Steane or Stene, a cousin of Richard Wodhull's is supposed to have sent him the Wodhull Coat-of-Arms, a rare and remarkable painting, now in the possession of Richard Lawrence Woodhull, of Setauket, Long Island, a lineal descendant in the seventh generation."

This Achievement of eighteen quarterings shows the coat of arms of all the heiresses who married in the Wodhull family, from the time of Nicholas, Baron de Wahull. (See Frontispiece for Wodhull Achievement.)

This heraldic painting said to be "one of the most valuable historic relics in this country," was fast fading under the touch of time but was fully restored in 1865.

The following is a literal copy of the original letter from Lord Crewe to his kinsman, Richard Wodhull, and is likewise in possession of Richard Lawrence Woodhull, of Setauket.

"Sr. I was heartily glad to find by yr letter, that it hath pleased God to blesse and prosper your family, and that you received the small present I sent you some time since wh I thought had been lost. For our country news, take this account. My father departed this life Dec. 12, 1679, and as he lived well, soe he had greate joye at his death, with a Longing to leave this world. "CREWE.

(Superscribed) "Ffor my loving Kinsman, Richard Wodhull, Esq.

"STEANE, Sep. 5, 1687."

(See Fac-simile of Crewe Letter.)

Baron Crewe of Steane married Dorothy, daughter of Sir William Foster of Bamborough Castle, Northumberland, Knight. It appears from the "Monumenta Anglicana," a collection of English epitaphs, by Le Neve, that her death occurred, October 16th, 1715.

"My uncle Sal" referred to in the above letter meant Salathiel Crewe. "Here lyeth the body of Salathiel Crewe Esq. the 4th son of Sir Thomas Crewe, late of Steane, in this County, Knt. who died ye 18th of April in the year of our Lord 1686, A-E 73."

(See "Monumenta Anglicana," Vol. 3, Page 161.)

His tomb is in Hinton Church, Northamptonshire, England.

The enclosure, or "the papers you desire," mentioned in the letter were, it seems highly probable, papers relating to the ancient lineage of the Wodhull family.

In 1846 there was in existence, according to the late Silas Lewis Condict, M. D., of New York City, a "Wodhull Genealogy," bearing the marks of great antiquity both in the appearance of the paper and the style of writing.

This was loaned to Dr. Condict, by Joseph Howland Woodhull, son of Ezra Conkling Woodhull. Mr. Joseph H. Woodhull died unmarried at Havana, Cuba, in 1850, and his sister Elizabeth Woodhull, died recently in Norwich, Connecticut, being the last of her line.

Fortunately, Dr. Condict made a very careful copy of the paper, the title of which runs as follows:—

"The Originall of the family of the Wodhulls from ye Conquest."

The final statement of said paper reads thus, "Lawrence Wodhull had issue Lawrence who died without issue and Richard Wodhull. Richard Wodhull had issue Richard and Nathaniel Wodhull, now living in America, on Long Island at Brookhaven."

(See Genealogical Appendix, Note Jj., for copy of "The Originall of the family of the Wodhulls from ye Conquest.")

Many years ago the Rev. John McDowell, D. D., of Philadelphia, writing of the Rev. John Woodhull, D. D., said, "He was descended from a long line of illustrious ancestors. I have seen in the family Bible, a list of his ancestors from William the Conqueror."

(See also "American Ancestry," Vol. VII., page 156.)

There are two interesting old volumes among the family treasures contained in the Woodhull homestead at Setauket. The first:

"Laws of New York from the year 1691, to 1773, inclusive."

Published according to an Act of the General Assembly. New York. Printed by Hugh Gaine, Printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty in the Province of New York. M.DCCLXXLV.

The first Assembly held in the third year of the Reign of King William and Queen Mary. Begun the 9th of April, 1691.

The second book is:

"Acts of Assembly passed in the Province of New York from 1691 to 1725."

Printed and sold by William Bradford, Printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty for the Province of New York.

The title page of each book contains a Crown, the Lion and Unicorn, also the motto of England.

In a family paper, once the property of Sarah Woodhull Arms, a granddaughter of the Rev. John Woodhull, D. D., among other statements, most of which seem well authenticated, is the following interesting, traditional item:—

"On coming to the Throne in June 1830 William 4th offered to restore the Title of Baron Wahull to the 'next of kin' in America and a Seat in the House of Lords."

In connection with this it may be remembered that Michael Wodhull, Esq., the last of his line in England, who died in 1816, having lost his wife, and being without an heir, willed his fine estate and magnificent library to his deceased wife's sister.

In an address presented at a Family Reunion June 23rd, 1900, the late Rev. John Alpheus Woodhull said, "The Woodhull race (almost a thousand years old) has outlasted one-half of the Nations of the world. It is more than twice as old as the discovery of America by Columbus, and goes back across more than one-half the time since the Christian Era. Our Flemish Ancestor was born more than five hundred years before Shakespeare, and our American Ancestor was born one hundred and fifty-six years before this free republic."

In early colonial history the name of Odell, as well as Wodhull frequently appears. After a close study of the subject there seems little doubt but that the Wodhulls and Odells can claim the same line of descent from Walter Flanderensis the first Baron de Wahull.

Richard Wodhull I., is frequently mentioned in Public Records as Richard Odell, but signatures to deeds and other papers seem invariably to have been written Richard Wodhull. The records of Richard Odell of Southampton, Long Island, are not to be confused with those of Richard Wodhull of Brookhaven or Setauket, Long Island.

The Odell and Wodhull families in America are entirely separate and distinct, although either might have reason to be proud to claim kinship with the other.

In looking up English references, time will be lost in searching for the Woodhull name, for, except in rare instances, the name is written Odell, de Wahull, or de Wahulle and Wodhull.

Benjamin Thompson, in his "History of Long Island," says, "The name was originally written Wodhull and continued to be so spelled for many years after the arrival of the family."

The additional letter is supposed to have been added, changing the name from Wodhull to Woodhull, in the fourth generation.

In accordance with this, the compilers of this Genealogy have used the latter spelling after the third generation.

The Deed, or "Bill of Sale," which follows this sketch is a facsimile of the original document, and as such, will doubtless prove of interest to all the descendants of Richard Wodhull I.

The exact date of his death is uncertain, it, however, must have been after October, 1690, as the Deed is dated the following year.

During the Revolution a number of the grave stones in the old Presbyterian church-yard at Setauket, were destroyed, among others, those of Richard Wodhull I., and Richard Wodhull II.

To-day, there stands a massive granite stone bearing the following inscription:—

NOTE B.—BARRON.

The Barron family was founded by Ellis Barron, one of the family of Palatine Barrons, of Burnchurch, in the County of Waterford, Ireland.

He was born in Ireland about 1600, and emigrated to America about 1640. He was made Freeman in Watertown, Massachusetts, June 2, 1641.

(See "American Family Antiquity.") (See Genealogy, No. 285.)

NOTE C.—BOLTON.

The Bolton family is of remote antiquity and bears one of the earliest British surnames upon record. Fuller in his "Worthies of England," mentions the Bolton family as one that "had comfortably continued a long time in good repute." Oughtrede de Bolton, Lord of Bolton by Bowland, was, according to Dugdale, the lineal representative of the Saxon Earls of Mercia.

He held the office of bow-bearer and falconer in the Royal Forests of Bowland and Gilsland.

Elias de Bolton living in 1134 was the father of Richard de Bolton.

Robert Bolton, author of the "History of West Chester County," and the "History of the Episcopal Church" in the same County, was a grandson of Robert Bolton born in 1757, a soldier in the Revolutionary War.

The first of the name in this country was Robert Bolton, born in the Parish of St. John's Wales, County York, in 1688, who settled in Philadelphia in 1718. He was a grandson of Adam Bolton, of Brookhouse, in 1570.

(See "Bolton Genealogy.") (See Genealogy, No. 408.)

Arms of the Boltons of Bolton.

Sable, a falcon, close, argent, beak'd, membered, jessed and bell'd, or, charged on the breast with a trefoil slipp'd proper.

NOTE D.—BULL SMITH.

The ancestor of the "Bull Smith" family of Long Island, was Major Richard Smith, 1st, who came from England to New England. early in the 17th Century, and later settled on Long Island, being the founder of Smithtown.

It is rather amusing to know that the sobriquet of this family of Smiths arose from the circumstance of an ancestor having trained a Bull to harness, using him instead of a horse.

(See "Antiquities of Long Island," by Gabriel Furman.)

Edmund Smith, grandson of Richard Smith, 1st, Patentee of Smithtown, Long Island, married Susannah Floyd, granddaughter of Richard Floyd, 1st, Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island.

In his Will dated 1734, Edmund Smith, Esq., mentions a daughter Margaret, who married Richard Woodhull.

Richard Smith, 2nd, married Hannah Tooker. Their daughter married Nathaniel Wodhull, son of Richard Wodhull II.

NOTE E.—CHESEBROUGH.

William Chesebrough, the first settler of English lineage in the town of Stonington, Connecticut, was born in England in the year 1594.

He came to this country when thirty-six years of age, and he, with three others, Thomas Stanton, Walter Palmer and Minor were the founders of Stonington.

A monument was erected to their memory in the ancient cemetery of Wequetequock, in 1899, that being the two hundred and fiftieth year of the founding of the first settlement.

William Chesebrough was elected Deputy to the General Court of Connecticut at Hartford in 1653, 1654, 1655 and 1656. He also held the offices of Assessor and Commissioner.

He was a man of strong Christian principles, and he and his wife, Anna Chesebrough, were enrolled among the first members of the church in Boston, Mass.

Chesebrough Coat of Arms.

Gu. three crosses pattée in fess, arg. between as many water bougets or. Crest, a demi lion rampant gu. holding between the paws a cross pattée or.

The Motto.—In England is, "Fidei coticula crux." (The cross the touchstone of faith.)

(See "Chesebrough Genealogy," by Anna Chesebrough Wildey.)

Four prominent American families, the Chesebrough, Maxwell, Van Zandt and Woodhull, are closely allied.

Marion Margaret Woodhull, daughter of Richard Miller Woodhull and Marion Margaret Maxwell (daughter of James Horner Maxwell and Katherine Van Zandt, who was a daughter of Jacobus Van Zandt, the Revolutionary patriot), married Henry Augustus Chesebrough.

(See Genealogy, No. 275.)

Katherine Van Zandt had the honor of opening the first Inauguration Ball as the partner of General Washington.

James Horner Maxwell was a son of William Maxwell, founder and President of the Bank of New York, of New York City.

NOTE F.—CONDICT.

John Cunditt, the first of the Cunditt, Condit or Condict family in America, is known to have been in this country as early as the year 1678.

In 1689 and 1691 he was the purchaser of lands "in the bounds of the town of Newark," Essex County, New Jersey.

This John Cunditt was of Norman descent, he married his first wife in Great Britain; his second wife Deborah ——— in America.

A certain John Conduit Knight, seems to have been a personage of considerable importance. "He married Catherine Barton, a niece of Sir Isaac Newton, with whom they resided during the lifetime of the celebrated Sir Isaac, and afterward inherited his estate; John Conduit succeeding Sir Isaac as Master and Warden of the Mint.

He died in 1730 and his wife in 1737, their monument is in Westminster Abbey. Their only daughter and child married a Mr. Wallop, eldest son of Lord Lymington." (See "Life of Sir Isaac Newton," by David Brewster.)

Samuel Condit, first grandson of John, who came to America, purchased about the year 1720, a large tract of land from the Indians, of New Jersey.

During his lifetime he gave each of his five sons fifty acres of land, erecting a house upon each lot, also giving to each son a family Bible.

The Hon. Lewis Condict, M. D., married, October 6, 1798, Martha, daughter of the Rev. Nathan Woodhull.

He was a graduate from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania. Sheriff of Morris County, New Jersey, in 1800.

He also represented his district in Congress from 1811 to 1833, except for two terms. He was a prominent member of the State Medical Society, and considered one of the best Latin scholars of his day.

(See "Condict Genealogy.") (See Genealogy, No. 156.)

The Rev. Jonathan Bailey Condict, D. D., married first, July 20, 1831, Eliza Keturah, daughter of the Rev. Selah Strong Woodhull, D. D.

(See Genealogy, No. 334.)

He married second, Sarah Strong Woodhull, his deceased wife's sister, May 5, 1836.

(See Genealogy, No. 336.)

NOTE G.—COOMBS.

The Coombs family came from England to America during the Colonial period.

In the church at Stratford-on-Avon, rendered famous by the monument of the great poet Shakespeare, are tablets in memory of the Coombs family.

The effigy of John Coombe, Esq., an intimate friend of Shakespeare, habited in a long gown, with book in hand, lies at full length within the historic church.

The following is a striking epitaph:

"Here lyeth intered ye body of John Combe Esq. who departed this life, ye 10th day of July Anno Domino 1614; bequeathed by his last will and testament, to pious and charitable uses these sums ensuing annually, to be paid forever, viz—XXS for two sermons to be preached in this church; six powndes XIII and 4 pence to buy ten gowndes for ten poor people within the borough of Stratford; and one hundred powndes to be lent unto 15 poor tradesmen of ye same borough from 3 years to 3 years changing these ptius every third year at the rate of fiftie shillings per annum; ye which increase be appoynted to be distributed towards ye relief of ye alms people therein." Then follows in Latin "Virtus post funera vivit."

In the same church are various other inscriptions relating to the family. Upon one monument are two busts in white marble—one of Richard Combe, Esq., and the other of Judith Combe his intended wife with the following,

"Here lyeth the body of Judith Combe, daughter of William Combe Esq., of Old Stratford, in ye County of Warwick who was to have been married unto Richard Combe of Hewsted, in the County of Hareford, Esq., had not death prevented it, by depriving her of life, to ye extreme grief and sorrow of both their friends; but more especially of ye said Richard Combe, who in testimony of his unfained love, hath erected this monument for perpetuating her pious memory. She took her last leave of life ye 17th day of August 1649, in ye arms of him who most entirely loved and was beloved of her, even to ye very death."

Philip Coombs was the first of the family to arrive in America. He settled in Newburyport, Mass. The exact date of his coming is not known, but the first date of record is March 12, 1739, which is the date of the will of William Johnson, of Newburyport, in which he leaves legacies to his daughter Lydia, the wife of Philip Coombs.

During the French War in 1756, Philip Coombs with his son, and other men from Newburyport, went to build boats on Lake Ontario for the colonial government, and at the surrender of Fort Oswego the whole party were taken prisoners and carried to France where they were imprisoned at Dijon. Having formerly dwelt on the Island of Guernsey, Philip Coombs was familiar with the French language and customs, which proved of great use to him at this time.

Falling ill, he died in the hospital at Dijon, France, January 22, 1757.

He was remarkable for his piety, which was of the stern unbending character that generally obtained in New England at that period, and also for his liberality. He was one of the founders of the Presbyterian church in Newburyport.

At the opening of the Revolutionary War, William Coombs, the son of Philip Coombs, was possessed of much influence and ample means, he at once and ardently entered into the cause of freedom, ready with his fortune or his life to serve in the patriotic work.

In 1775, he bought munitions of war from the French Island of Guadaloupe, at the risk of his life and property and presented the whole cargo to the authorities at Newburyport asking no recompense.

He afterward served on the Committee of Safety and Correspondence, which in those times assumed and exercised some of the power of government, and was continually at the post of duty until regular authority was restored.

"His residence probably approached nearer the style of an old English gentleman's estate than any other in town, and he himself was the best representative of that class of persons.

"He was the gentleman of Newburyport. By him were brought down the fashions of the colonial and revolutionary periods to the latest date." William Coombs died in 1814, aged 78 years. (See "Memorabilia," published by the Newburyport Herald 1856-57.)

Philip Coombs, the son of William Coombs, made an exploration of the Penobscot country and foreseeing its importance left Newburyport and settled on the banks of the Penobscot River, becoming one of the founders of the City of Bangor, Me.

Philip Coombs' son, Philip Henry Coombs, of Bangor, married Eliza Boardman, of Newburyport.

Philip Henry Coombs' son is Philip Coombs of Bangor, who married Sarah Woodhull.

(See Genealogy, No. 381.)

The Coombs Coat-of-Arms: "A Dexter hand and arm, embowered in armor holding a broken tilting spear."

NOTE H.—DU BOIS.

Louis Du Bois, usually called Louis the Walloon, was born in Wicres, near Lille, in French Flanders, October 27, 1626. The farm of his father Chrétien Du Bois, is still pointed out.

Chrétien Du Bois married Catherine, daughter of Matthieu Blancon, of Artois, France.

Numerous descendants of Louis Du Bois, Patentee of New Paltz, settled throughout New York State, and also in Monmouth County, New Jersey.

The Rev. Benjamin Du Bois, the Revolutionary patriot, is of this line. Isaac Du Bois served as a private in Captain Abraham Deyo's Company, in the Third Ulster County Regiment.

Major Zachary Du Bois was a prisoner of war of the British for some time, and his brother Lewis Du Bois was Colonel of the 5th Continental Regiment in 1776, having previously made a fine record in the Regiment of Colonel Jesse Woodhull.

An interesting old Dutch Bible now in the possession of General Nathaniel Du Bois, of Newburgh, New York, was printed in 1634. It weighs fourteen pounds, and is covered with leather, each corner having a brass knob a quarter of an inch thick.

(See "History of New Paltz and its People," by Ralph Le Fevre.)

Jesse Woodhull, of Blooming Grove, Colonel of the Orange County Militia, married Hester Du Bois, of New Paltz, New York.

Their descendants have heretofore supposed this Hester to have been the daughter of Captain Louis Du Bois.

According to Mr. Ralph Le Fevre, author of the "History of New Paltz and its People," Hester, was the daughter of Nathaniel Du Bois, son of Louis Du Bois, Jr., and Rachel Hasbrouck (daughter of Abraham Hasbrouck and Maria Deyo).

Nathaniel Du Bois located at Blooming Grove, now Salisbury Mills, Orange County. He married in the year 1726, Gertrude Bruyn.

Their daughter Hester was the twin of Zachary, who became a Major in the Revolution.

She married in the year 1753, Colonel Jesse Woodhull.

They had four sons and three daughters.

(See Genealogy, No. 26.)

NOTE J.—FLOYD.

Richard Floyd, the common ancestor of the name, on Long Island, was a native of Wales, and came to America about the year 1650, and settled at Setauket, Long Island.

He, with Richard Wodhull, (I.), was one of fifty-five original proprietors of Brookhaven. Some portion of his large estate is still in possession of his descendants. (See "Thompson's History of Long Island.")

The Floyds have inter-married with some of the first old families in America.

Nicoll Floyd, second son of the second Richard Floyd, married Tabitha, daughter of Jonathan Smith (2nd), of Smithtown, Long Island, their daughter Ruth married General Nathaniel Woodhull.

William Floyd, a descendant of the above mentioned Nicoll, was a distinguished patriot of the Revolution, a Signer of the Declaration of Independence, and a Member of Congress.

He married first, Isabella, daughter of William Jones, of Southampton, second, Joanna, daughter of Benajah Strong, of Setauket, Long Island.

Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Floyd (4th), and Arabella, daughter of the Hon. David Jones, married John Peter Delancey, son of Governor Delancey. One of their sons, William Heathcote Delancey, became Bishop of Western New York. Susan Floyd became the wife of James Fenimore Cooper. David Richard Floyd married Sarah, daughter of Hendrick Onderdonk.

"Richard Floyd (4th), in accordance with the will of his grandfather and in pursuance of the act of March 14, 1778, added the surname Jones, and the family is now known by the patronymic of Floyd-Jones."

Brigadier Thomas Floyd-Jones, and Major General Henry Floyd-Jones are of this family.

Sarah Woodhull, second daughter of Colonel Jesse Woodhull and Hester Du Bois, married General John Floyd, of Smithtown, Long Island.

NOTE K.—FORBES.

The Forbes family is Scotch and very ancient, its origin being too remote to be now known. The most reliable tradition says, the first progenitor of the family was a lord in Ireland, son of Ochonocher, who came to Scotland to serve the King of Scotland in his wars, and for this received the Castle of Urquhart.

His son Ochonocher, Lord of Logie, killed a great boar and the name became gradually Foboar, Forbrst, Forbush, to Forbes.

It was a great and powerful family as far back as the 14th Century, for "from 1371, till Howdonne, in the year 1513, the great Lord Forbes had the whole guiding of his majesties affairs, * * * betwixt the cairne of Mounte, and Bush of Kaitress, as the several sealls and signets and tablets of the severale Kings and queens do declare, which are yet extant."

So says an old chronicler of the family in 1580, and after enumerating the high offices held by the family, he adds, "So that it seems they have been verre great."

The Forbes were Highlanders, of Aberdeen, Royalists, and espousing the cause of Charles Stuart; of the old family places, Culloden is still a residence of one branch of the family.

The first Forbes in this country was Daniel Forbes, of Cambridge, Mass., who was born in Scotland about 1620 and married in Cambridge, Mass., in 1660.

From this Daniel (1st), have descended a numerous connection. Many of the Forbes were in the Indian and Revolutionary Wars, and have occupied positions of trust and honor, both in Colonial and later times.

Mrs. Sarah Forbes Woodhull was the great great great granddaughter of Daniel (1st), and the daughter of William Forbes of Bangor, Me., who when seventeen years of age, was one of fourteen men who enlisted from Brookfield, Mass., in the call issued January 22, 1780, to reinforce the Continental Army in Rhode Island.

He was stationed later at West Point, and was one of a party sent in pursuit of Arnold. Had they started a little earlier they might have captured him, as they distinctly saw the traitor stepping over the side of the British barge.

Mrs. Woodhull's home for twenty-five years, after marrying the Rev. Richard Woodhull, was in Thomaston, Me., and while residing there she became an intimate friend of two of the daughters of General Knox, of the Revolutionary War, whose home was there.

Mrs. Woodhull was accomplished and brilliant, and of marked literary ability, her poems being particularly beautiful.

(See Genealogy, No. 178.)

The Forbes Coat of Arms: Azure, three boars' heads, couped, or., Supporters—Two greyhounds, or., couped gu.

Crest: A Stag's head, attired ppr.

Motto: Grace me guide.

NOTE L.—FORDHAM.

The Fordham family is one of the oldest on Long Island. The Rev. Robert Fordham came from England to America in the year 1641. He landed in Massachusetts, but a short time later settled at Hempstead, Long Island, his name being first mentioned in Keith's patent of that town.

The Fordhams were people of considerable estate and of unusual learning for those early days. The Rev. Robert Fordham was the second pastor of the Southampton Presbyterian Church. It is said that no generation has been without a preacher from that time to the present.

The Rev. Jonah Fordham, son of the Rev. Robert Fordham and Elizabeth Benning, ("a member of the church at Milford, Connecticut,") was born about the year 1633. He was graduated from Harvard, B. A., in 1658, and settled at Hempstead, Long Island, in 1663.

B. F. Thompson says: "He was so much esteemed by the people that in 1663 the town voted that he should have allotments with the other inhabitants and also a 200 pound estate, if he pleased, which according to the rule of valuation then adopted, amounted to 500 acres, with woodland in proportion." His father having died in 1674, he "returned to Southampton, * * * and labored in the ministry there, probably till the arrival of the Rev. Mr. (Joseph) Taylor, in 1680."

" 'Sept. 26, 1687,' " continued Thompson, apparently quoting the records of Brookhaven, " 'it was ordered by a major part of the town, that Mr. Jonah Fordham of Southampton, be sent unto, desiring him to officiate in the work of the ministry in this town,' " but he declined the invitation, declining a settlement on account of his health, but remained here six years, when he returned to Southampton where he died July 17, 1696, aged 63 years.

Temperance Fordham, who married Richard Wodhull II., was a daughter of the Rev. Jonah Fordham, granddaughter of the Rev. Robert Fordham, and sister of the Rev. Josiah Fordham.

There is a question whether or not Temperance did not first marry a Topping.

In Southampton Records, p. 262, occurs the following:

"Richard Wodhull of Brookhaven was marryed with Temperance Topping of Southampton upon ye 20 of Nov. 1684."

(See Genealogy, No. 2.)

NOTE M.—FOSTER.

The genealogy of the Foster family is traceable in America, England, France, and the Low Countries, for some centuries.

Its progenitor was Anacher, who held the office of Grand Forester of Flanders, in the early part of the ninth century A. D., and whose immediate descendants intermarried with the royal houses and noble families of Flanders, France and England.

One of them, Sir Richard Forester, a brother-in-law of William the Conqueror, was with him in his invasion of England, and was knighted for bravery on the field of Hastings (1066), and became the founder of the English family of Forester or Foster.

Eighteen generations flourished from his time until the coming of the emigrant ancestor, Christopher Foster to this country. He was born in England in 1603, and with his wife Frances, came to America in 1635.

He was made freeman at Boston in 1637, sixty acres of land being allotted to him. From Boston he removed to Long Island.

The Fosters have been residents of Suffolk County for two hundred and fifty years. (See "History of Long Island," Ross & Pelletreau).

(See Genealogy, No. 232.) (See Genealogy, No. 234.)
(See Genealogy, No. 236.)

NOTE N.—FROST.

"William Frost of Matinecock, Long Island, was awarded a new purchaser's accommodation at Setauket, Brookhaven, New York, September 26, 1672." (See "American Ancestry," Vol. IX., p. 23.)

In the early colonial days two Frost brothers came from Wales and settled upon Long Island; later, Joseph Frost removed to Tuscumbia, Alabama.

His son, Thomas Frost married Crissy, the daughter of Reuben Price, who fought in the Revolution, and settled in Texas.

Colonel Thomas Clayborne Frost was an early settler in San Antonio and for thirty-five years was closely identified with the business interests in that city and vicinity.

He was born December 31, 1833, and was graduated from Irving College, Tennessee, in 1853, taking first honors as well as being awarded the Latin Professorship the same year.

In 1854 he was made Professor of Latin, in Austin College, Texas, and at this time commenced the study of law with Judge Yoakum, and Governor Sam Houston.

In the beginning of the Civil War, he became Colonel of the First Texas Mounted Rifles, which position he filled until the close of the war.

He was a man of influence and of marked ability, as well as of affluence. He was President of the Frost National Bank of San Antonio, and a large property holder in Southwest Texas. His name has always stood for rare business ability and strict integrity.

He died in November, 1903.

His first wife, Bertie Eastland Roberts, whom he married in the year 1858, and who died in the year 1873, was the mother of Mrs. Josiah Townsend Woodhull, of San Antonio, Texas.

(See Genealogy, No. 471.)

He married second, December 31, 1877, Josephine Houston, by whom he had three sons: Thomas C. Frost, Jr., Joseph H. Frost and John Frost.

NOTE O.—HELME.

Thomas Helme of the Kirkehouse in Goosnargh, gent.

"The Kirkhouse or Church house was one of the oldest buildings in Goosnargh."

(See "History of Goosnargh, in County of Lancaster," by H. Fishwick.)

Thomas Helme, was one of the Patentees of Brookhaven, Long Island, in 1689, and with Richard Wodhull (I.), was commissioned to lay out Little Neck in 1687.

The name of William Helme is on the Rolls of Brookhaven Company, "in ye Suffolk Regiment, Anno. Dom. 1715, of Henry Smith's Company." John and Nathaniel Wodhull, brothers of his wife Dorothy, were in the same Company.

(See Genealogy, No. 11.)

NOTE P.—HEWITT.

The Hewitt family is closely allied to the Pilgrim Fathers of "Mayflower" fame. Joseph Hewitt, an early Colonial settler, married Mary, daughter of Samuel Chesebrough and Priscilla Alden.

Joseph Hewitt, born May 2, 1731, married Jane Babcock. Nathaniel Hewitt, born in the year 1763, married Sarah Avery. Their son Henry Hewitt, born in the year 1795, married Althea Brush. Their son Charles Nathaniel Hewitt, M. D., born in the year 1835, married Helen Hawley. He was Surgeon of the 50th New York Volunteer Engineers and saw active service through the entire Civil War. Later, he resumed the practice of medicine in Redwood, Minnesota, and was for twenty years President of the State Board of Health.

His daughter, Charlotte Althea Hewitt married James Clifford Woodhull.

NOTE Q.—HOPKINS.

The earliest known ancestor of the Hopkins family was Stephen Hopkins, a native of England, probably a resident of Coventry.

In company with Elder Brewster he joined the party of colonists led by Gates and Somers which sailed for Virginia in 1609.

On this voyage he served as "lay reader," or assistant chaplain. The vessel was shipwrecked off Bermuda, an island hitherto undiscovered, and for six months the colonists were forced to live in isolation.

Stephen Hopkins claimed that the shipwreck released all from their contract to the Virginia Company. A summary court-martial convicted him of treason and sentenced him to death. Only the intervention of those whose favor he had won saved his life. Sir George Somers, the Admiral and Chaplain, besought his pardon. But not until the hour of execution had nearly arrived did Sir Thomas Gates yield and grant his release.

By 1612, Stephen was again in England, still a non-conformist. In 1620 he joined in England the Pilgrims, who had returned from Leyden, and in that year sailed with them in the "Mayflower," accompanied by his wife, three children and two servants. On the sea voyage his little boy, Oceanus, was born; but died the following February.

Stephen Hopkins was the fourteenth signer of the "Mayflower Compact," by which agreement the forty-one subscribers pledged support and protection to each other in the colony they were about to found in the New World.

When the Pilgrims first came ashore Captain Miles Standish was sent out with sixteen men to examine the country. William Bradford, Stephen Hopkins and Edward Tilley were joined to this band for counsel and advice.

Stephen Hopkins was later associated with Winslow on an embassy to Massasoit. He was for three years on the Governor's Council and was a volunteer in the war against the Pequod Indians.

Stephen Hopkins, who bore the honorable title of "Mr." was awarded "six acres on the south side of the brook." No other had so much land except William Brewster. "He also owned the first horse in the colony and was part owner of the first boat."

The grandson of Stephen, William Hopkins, moved from Massachusetts and settled on Shelter Island, N. Y. His son Samuel moved to Long Island, settling in 1757, at Old Maris, since changed to Miller Place.

Here he purchased between six and seven hundred acres of land. On this homestead three more generations bearing the same name have lived.

Samuel Judson Hopkins, fourth generation, still resides on the farm purchased by his ancestor 150 years ago.

Stephen Hopkins, Governor of Rhode Island, and one of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, is of this family.

It may be noted here that Ex-Vice-President Levi P. Morton claims Stephen Hopkins as his fifth great-grandfather by collateral descent.

It is interesting to note that the first naval effort of the Revolution was made in Philadelphia.

Commander Esek Hopkins (of this family), stepped into his barge at Walnut Street wharf in January, 1776, to take command of a squadron of eight cruisers, and made his way to his flagship, the "Alfred."

As he reached the deck Lieutenant John Paul Jones, afterwards famous in history, unfurled a yellow silk flag bearing the device of a pine tree and a rattlesnake with a motto "Don't tread on me" and this was the first flag of the American Navy.

The Arms of the Coventry house of Hopkins are as follows: Sa. on a chev. betw. three pistols or, as many roses gu.

Crest:—A tower per bend indented ar. and gu. flames issuing from the top and windows ppr.

The motto above the crest, Interprimos (among the first), shows that the Hopkins family were placed in the first rank of the Commoners of England, or what was known as the untitled nobility.

The motto under the shield, "Aut suavitate aut vi," translates "Either by courtesy or main force."

In some copies of the Arms the above mentioned mottoes are replaced by a third: "Pietas est Pax."

(See Genealogy, No. 51.) (See Genealogy, No. 145.)

NOTE R.—HOWELL.

William Howell, of Wedon, in the County of Bucks, England, married first Maud, who died, and left children; John the elder and John the younger. He married second, Anne Hampton; and had a son Henry. He also had other children, Jacob, and Rachel, wife of the Rev. Thomas Willis.

His will dated November 30, 1557, directed his body to be buried in the parish church of Wingrave, in the Chancel before the high Altar. Gives his wife Anne his lands in Walton and Hamme for her life; at her death they are to go to Henry. Gives his eldest son John his lands in Marsh Gibbon at his death, in default of issue to his son Jacob. He also gave each of his daughters 20 pounds, and left a legacy for bells for the Hardwich church.

He died in 1557, and his son John died without issue in 1576. According to the parish register of Marsh Gibbon, "Henry Howell, Gent, was burried ye 22nd day of July 1625."

Edward Howell, the son of Henry Howell, of Marsh Gibbon, was the first of the family to come to America.

From the parish register in Marsh Gibbon we learn that he was baptized the 22nd of July, 1584.

He disposed of considerable estates in Bucks County, England, in 1639, among which was the Manor of Westbury, purchased by his grandfather, William Howell, in 1536. He came to Boston in in 1639 with his family, and was made freeman March 14, 1639. He moved to Lynn, where he had a grant of 500 acres. He seems to have been the leader of the new settlement projected on Long Island in the winter of 1639-40, as the compact, or agreement of terms, as well as the laws adopted by the first settlers were in his handwriting, and to the last year of his life he was a magistrate and member of the Colonial legislature at Hartford.

The parish register in Marsh Gibbon states, that Frances, wife of Edward Howell, Gent, was buried the 2nd of July, 1630. He afterward married Eleanor ———. His son Richard, baptized 1629, married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Halsey (the first of the name in America). His son Hezekiah, born 1677; married Phœbe, daughter of Thomas Halsey, (2nd). He was known as Lieutenant Hezekiah Halsey Howell.

His son Hezekiah (was known as Hezekiah (1st), being the first to settle at Blooming Grove, New York) was born May 6th, 1709; married Susanna, daughter of Job Sayre. Their son Hezekiah (2nd, in the town of Blooming Grove), born September 13, 1741; married Juliana Woodhull, whose daughter Abigail married Captain Ebenezer Woodhull.

NOTE S.—JONES.

The family of Captain Thomas Jones, of Long Island, the first ancestor of the name in the United States, was undoubtedly of Welsh origin. Characteristics of that race are discernible in most all members of the family in America.

The first settlers of this country were often neglectful in preserving the dates of family records from the Mother country, but enough has come down through tradition and heirlooms to prove unquestionably that he was of gentle birth and breeding.

His grandson, the Hon. Thomas Jones, Justice of the Supreme Court of the Province of New York, and Thompson's History of Long Island, say "he fought in the Battle of the Boyne in 1690 on the side of the House of Stuart," then struggling to maintain the Throne of England.

After the defeat of James II., and his flight into France, many of his officers and followers sought refuge in the New World, and Thomas Jones came to the Island of Jamaica.

The Stuart sovereigns (with all their faults,) never forgot their friends and followers and, "he was granted a commission from the King to cruise against Spanish property on the High Seas."

The final overthrow of the House of Stuart and the accession of William and Mary rendered this commission void, and he came at once to Rhode Island in 1692. Here, he married a daughter of Thomas Townsend, Esq., and received from his father-in-law a deed for a valuable tract of land on the South side of Long Island.

Here he came to live, and built the first brick house on that part of the Island, which stood for over a hundred and forty years. In 1837, it was removed to make way for the mansion built by the Hon. David S. Jones.

In 1706 he was commissioned High Sheriff of Queens County, he was also Major of Queens Co. Regiment, and was appointed by Lord Cornbury, Ranger of Nassau, the legal name of Long Island at that period.

He died in 1713, leaving three sons and four daughters, and is buried in the family grave-yard at Massapequa, Long Island.

The inscription on his tombstone, written by himself, is as follows:

"From distant lands, to this Wild Waste he came,
This seat he choose, and here he fixed his name
Long may his sons this peaceful, spot enjoy,
And no ill-fate their off-spring e'er annoy."

From this gentleman are descended the families of Jones and Floyd-Jones, which have been distinguished for the celebrity of four generations at the bar, and on the bench, of the Colony, City and State of New York, for a period of a century and a half.

The late Walter R. Jones, of Cold Spring, Long Island, was the founder in 1840, of the Atlantic Mutual Marine Insurance Company of New York City. His untiring industry, high character and honor, raised this Association to the highest rank, and it is to-day the greatest Marine Insurance Company in the world.

In the family of Oliver Livingston Jones, Esq., of Cold Spring, is still preserved a china punch bowl, upon which are inscribed these words:

"Heroick Britons Boldly Strike,
Renown of old Maintain,
Your Ancient Fathers when alive
Oft Humbled France & Spain."

(See Genealogy, No. 246.) (See Genealogy, No. 468.)

NOTE T.—KILBOURN.

There is abundant proof that the family name of Kilburn or Kilbourn is derived from the Town of Kilburn, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, England.

It is a matter of history that the Kilburns were originally in this county, from whence they went into Cambridgeshire and Essex.

In 1233 A. D., Wiliam De Kilbourne was Lord of the Manor of Kilbourne, Yorkshire.

The following is from the "Rolls of Scotland" preserved in the Tower of London, and Westminster Abbey, "A. D. 1336, John De Kylburn is appointed Chief Commissary of the Works in the camp occupied by the King of England and Scotland."

Two years later (1338) John Kilborn, probably the same person, is referred to in the "Rolls," as "Governor of the Works in the Royal Camp in Scotland."

The common ancestor of all the Kilbourn, Kilbourne or Kilburn families in the Western Continent was born at Wood Ditton in the County of Cambridge, A. D. 1578.

(See "Kilbourne Genealogy.")

Aaron Kilburn married Hannah, daughter of Benjamin Woodhull, his brother Timothy married Clement or Clementine, another daughter of Benjamin Woodhull.

This Benjamin Woodhull is, the progenitor of what is called the "Canadian Line" of Woodhulls, as he with the Kilburns having been driven out of Northwestern New York by the depredations of the Indians, settled about the year 1795 in Delaware, Middlesex County, Canada.

(See Genealogy, No. 113.) (See Genealogy, No. 115.)

NOTE U.—LAWRENCE.

The Lawrence family has an ancient and distinguished pedigree: Robert Lawrence an intrepid Crusader was with Richard Cœur de Lion in the Holy Land.

It was this brave Knight who at the beleaguerment of St. John D'Acre 1191 A. D., first planted the banner of the Cross on the battlements of the city. He was made Sir Robert Lawrence of Ashton Hall, Lincolnshire, England. From his time down, the family records are complete.

This family is closely allied to the ambitious Dudley, to the Earl of Warwick, to the brilliant Leicester, and to Sir Philip Sydney.

Sir James Lawrence married Matilda Washington, sister of the direct ancestor of the first President of the Republic.

The alliance with the Woodhull family was "another union of landed proprietors, which strengthened the powerful Newtown branch of the Lawrence family."

(See Riker's "Annals of Newtown," and Thompson's "History of Long Island.")

Captain James Lawrence was the intrepid naval hero of the Chesapeake. It was in the battle of June 1, 1813, that Captain Lawrence, when dying of a mortal wound, gave his famous order, "Tell the men to fire faster, and not give up the ship."

(See "Famous Families of New York.")

NOTE V.—LETTER FROM GENERAL NATHANIEL WOODHULL TO THE NEW YORK CONVENTION AT HARLEM.

JAMAICA, August 28th, 1776.

I must again let you know my situation. I have about 70 men and about 20 of the troop, which is all the force I have or can expect, and I am daily growing less in number. The people are so alarmed in Suffolk, that they will not any more of them march; and as to Cols. Smith and Remsen, they cannot join me, for the communication is cut off between us. I have sent about 1100 cattle to the great fields on the plains, yesterday. About 300 more have gone this morning to the same place, and I have ordered a guard of an officer and seven privates. They can get no water in those fields. My men and horses are worn out with fatigue. The cattle are not all gone off toward Hempstead. I ordered them off yesterday; but they were not able to take them along. I think the cattle are in as much danger on the north side as on the south side; and have ordered the inhabitants to remove them, if you cannot send me an immediate reinforcement.

(Taken from "Journals of the New York Provincial Congress.")

LONG ISLAND, Aug. 28th, 1776.

SIR:—I was just now honored with your favor of this date, with General Woodhull's letter, and should esteem myself happy, were it in my power to afford the assistance required, but the enemy having landed a considerable part of their force, here, and at the same time may have reserved some to attack New York, it is the opinion, not only of myself, but of all my general officers I have had an opportunity of consulting with, that the men we have are not more than competent to the defence of those lines, and the several posts which must be defended. This reason, and this alone, prevents my complying with your request, I shall beg leave to mention in confidence, that a few days ago, upon the enemy's first landing here, I wrote to Governor Trumbull, recommending him to throw over a body of 1000 men on the Island to annoy the enemy in their rear, if the state of the colony would admit of it. Whether it will be done, I cannot determine. That colony having furnished a large proportion of men, I was, and still am, doubtful whether it could be done. If it could, I am satisfied it will, from the zeal and readiness they have ever shown to give every possible succor. I am hopeful they will be in a condition to do it; and if they are, those troops, I doubt not, will be ready and willing to give General Woodhull any assistance he may want.

But cannot the militia effect what he wishes to do? They, I believe, must be depended on in the present instance for relief.

I have the honor to be, in great haste,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

(From "Journals of the New York Provincial Congress.")

NOTE X.—LETTERS FROM CAMP WRITTEN BY THE REV. JOHN WOODHULL, CHAPLAIN 7TH BATTALION PENNSYLVANIA.

Wednesday 11 o Clock at Night 1776.
NEWARK, Aug. 27

MY DEAR SALLY:—The solemn Day is come at last,—Long Island is made a field of Blood—now the cannon & small arms make a continued roar, even at this time of Night: Day before yesterday the Battle began, and with some intermission has continued till now, yea now is roaring in my ears and God only knows when it will end.

Yesterday morning it was very hot, as yet we have no account which may be fully depended on, only that in general that Howe has landed with most of his men upon Long Island. Small parties engaged till yesterday morning, when they made an attack upon us, they were beat back three times, the last time our People pursued them too far, when a strong reinforcement of the Enemy endeavored to cut off our retreat and did us a good deal of damage, 'tis reported that General Sullivan and Stirling are missing. Tis also said we have made great havoc amongst them—but I can tell but very little for certainty, as yet, except that there is a mighty Battle which is continuing—May a good God grant that it end in our favor and for the glory of his Name! Goodnight!

Thursday morning: The firing ceased a little before 12 o Clock last night,—have heard only a few guns this morning; when I get particulars shall write.

BARGIN, Thursday Evening.

The great firing yesterday and last night it seems was made only by Parties, not a general engagement, in which we only lost one Man, how many fell the Day before is uncertain, some say 500 of ours are missing—our People have lost no ground but are in high spirits, can add no more as am in haste—My Love to you and all.

JOHN WOODHULL.

N. B.—Expect to be here sometime.

FRIDAY, BERGEN, Aug. 30th, 1776.

MY DEAR SALLY:—Thro' divine goodness I am very well as are our Congregation in general that are here. Adam Woods has the ague. General Washington has thought proper to draw his men from Long Island, this was done last night.

The enemy are now firing upon New York, from Long Island; our men here are drawing up to be in readiness, in case we are needed.

How many are lost upon the Island is yet uncertain, some say we have 700 missing and that we have killed twice as many of the enemy, tho I believe it is but guess work as yet—

Generals Sullivan and Stirling who are missing are said to be prisoners, it is also said General Grant on the other side is killed, they talk of another General of theirs Killed.

It is reported that Col. Atly is wounded and a prisoner. Think it likely that our People will burn New York, and retreat into the chain of Forts which are above it—when that is done am in hopes our Enemies will get no farther. Poor Long Island! Know not what will become of my Relations there. May God help them. They are left to the mercy of our Cruel Enemy.

Our men are in high spirits and I trust we shall, thro' ye help of God soon break the power of our Foes.

My Love to the Girls, my little son, and the Neighbors. Remember me to Elsy and the boys—and accept yourself the best affections of your ——

JOHN WOODHULL.

N. B.—Neddy Bird is amongst ye missing. Col. Hand is well.

NOTE Y.—LONGSTRETH.

The grandfather of Hannah Longstreth, Benjamin Dennis, came from England about 1760.

He married Hannah Little, of Shrewsbury, New Jersey, and although a Quaker, such was his love for his adopted country, he entered the service of the army as Captain in the First Company of Third Battalion of the Militia of Monmouth County, New Jersey.

He was killed about the close of the Revolution; near what is now called Farmingdale, New Jersey.

The original Commission issued to Captain Dennis, July 17, 1776, is in the possession of his great-grandson, Lambert Woodhull, of Dayton, Ohio.

(See Genealogy, No. 220.)

NOTE Z.—LUTE-NORTON.

Anson Lewis Lute, was a direct descendant of William Lute, first Governor of Connecticut.

The family lived in England in the reign of King John (1209). Since Elizabeth's reign the name has been spelled Leete.

Jeannette Betsey Norton, descended from Sir John Norton, or Norville, (who married a daughter of Lord Grey de Ruthven,) a direct descendant in the 7th generation of the Seigneur de Norvile, who went to England with William the Conqueror (1066).

(See "American Ancestry," Vol. IV., page 190.)

(See Genealogy, No. 606.)

NOTE Aa.—MILLER.

One of the first settlers of Easthampton, Long Island, was John Miller, of Maidstone, County Kent, England. His name is on the Town Records as a Town Trustee in 1659.

Andrew Miller, his son, settled Miller's Place, Long Island, which took from him its name. The settlement dating from the year 1671.

Miller's Place located upon a level plain at some fifty feet above tide water, is said to be one of the most beautiful villages on the North side of Long Island. Numerous descendants of John Miller the pioneer colonist, are residents of Long Island to-day.

Richard Miller, supposed to be a son of Andrew, married Dorothy, daughter of Nathaniel Wodhull, of Setauket, Long Island. Their daughter Sarah married her cousin, Richard Woodhull.

NOTE Bb.—NEILSON.

John Neilson, M. D., came from Belfast, Ireland, and settled at Raritan Landing, near New Brunswick, New Jersey.

He married Joanna, daughter of Andrew Coeymans, who came from Holland and first settled on the Hudson, on Coeyman's patent, and afterward removed to Raritan Landing.

His son, Colonel John Neilson, was born March 11, 1745; on attaining his majority he engaged in business as a shipping merchant with his father's brother, James Neilson, at New Brunswick, New Jersey.

He married, December 31, 1768, Catharine, daughter of John Voorhees. From the first, he was a zealous advocate of the rights of the people and was commissioned Colonel of a command of minute men by the Provincial Congress of New Jersey, August 31, 1775.

August 1, 1776, he was Colonel of the 2nd Middlesex Militia, and was in active service with General Washington at the close of December, 1776. He was made a Brigadier-General of Militia, February 21, 1777.

He was elected a member of the Continental Congress, March 6, 1778, but could not be spared from the State to take his seat. He continued in active service through 1779, and was made Quartermaster General of the New Jersey force in 1780—a position of great responsibility and labor.

He was a delegate to the Convention which framed the State Constitution, of which he was the last survivor. He was also a member of the House of Assembly, 1800-1801.

During his active life he was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, and for fifty years an elder therein.

He died March 3, 1833, in his eighty-eighth year.

His daughter, Gertrude Neilson, was the wife of the Rev. George Spofford Woodhull.

(See Genealogy, No. 134.)

NOTE Cc.—NICOLL.

The Nicoll family is descended from John Nicoll, of Islip, Northamptonshire, England, who died in the year 1467.

The Coat-of-Arms of the family was displayed on the windows of the Church of St. Nicholas, at Islip, where John Nicoll was buried.

A curious fact is noted in the family history of "The Descendants of John Nicoll of Islip, England," viz:—William Nicoll, son of John of Islip, married for his second wife, Mary Woodhull, (the proper spelling was Wodhull,) daughter of Lawrence Woodhull, "gentleman" of Thenford, Northamptonshire.

A descendant in America, of Lawrence Woodhull, Elizabeth, daughter of General Nathaniel Woodhull and Ruth Floyd, married Henry Nicoll, the fifth great-grandson of the above mentioned William Nicoll of Islip.

(See "The Descendants of John Nicoll of Islip, England.")

Matthias Nicoll was Mayor of New York in 1671, and was a member of the first General Assembly of the Colony of New York in 1683.

His son William, married Anne, daughter of Jeremias Van Rensselaer. His daughter Margaret married Colonel Richard Floyd.

Henry Nicoll, who married Elizabeth Woodhull, was graduated from King's College (now Columbia University), in 1774.

(See Genealogy, No. 69.)

Nicoll motto: Sed Cui Fide Vide.

NOTE Dd.—PELLETREAU.

The ancestors of the Pelletreau family were Huguenots, who upon the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, fled from France and sought safety and religious freedom in a foreign clime.

The first of the family in America were Jean Pelletreau and his wife Magdalena, also their nephews, Jean and Elie, the latter having two sons: Jean and Elie (whose names were soon Anglicised into John and Elias).

These were direct descendants from an ancestor who was physician to Admiral Coligny, and like his illustrious patron perished in the massacre of Saint Bartholomew, August 24, 1572. King Charles IX. granted him a coat of arms, July 17, 1571.

The following is a translation of the description: "Azure, upon a column in pale or, encircled with a serpent proper, and bordered on the dexter and sinister sides by a martlet, or; crest, a helmet."

Jean (I.), was naturalized in New York, September 22, 1687, and died in 1700. His wife Magdalena died in 1702, without children.

Jean (II.), died in 1703, childless. He and his brother Elie were naturalized July 10, 1696. The native place of this family was the village of Arces, in what is now the Department of Charente Inferieure.

They were all members of the French Church in New York, and in their wills left funds toward the support of its poor. Their names are found in connection with the troubles in that church, as in favor of the Rev. Lewis Row. (See "Documentary History of New York," Vol. III.)

Elie Pelletreau died in 1730, leaving sons Elias, Paul, Francis, John and Benjamin and a daughter Magdalena. Elias Smith Pelletreau, great-great-grandson of Elie Pelletreau, who died in 1730, married Hannah Woodhull Smith, only child of Oliver Smith, of Moriches, by his first wife, Hannah Woodhull, daughter of Colonel Jesse Woodhull, who lived at Mastic, Long Island, but after the Revolution removed to Orange County, New York.

(See Genealogy, No. 75.)

NOTE Ee.—PICKARD.

John Pickard, the first ancestor of the Pickard family in America, came from Rowly, England.

He became a farmer, and for five generations the family has held to the same occupation in Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

None of the sons of Samuel Pickard, however, followed the quiet, uneventful life of agriculture. Four completed a college course; two engaged in educational work; two entered the ministry, and two entered the mercantile life, one of whom is a prominent merchant in Boston.

(See Genealogy, No. 339.)

NOTE Ff.—READING.

The Reading family is of ancient origin, as has been said, their best monument is the English settlement Reading, the shiretown of Berks.

Colonel John Reading, the founder of the New Jersey family of this name, is supposed to have emigrated to America in 1684. He was one of the largest landed proprietors in the province.

The early spelling of the name was de Redygne, Rydinge, and Redding.

(See "Reading Howell, Genealogy.") (See Genealogy, No. 305.)

NOTE Gg.—SCHUREMAN-NEVIUS.

Jacobus (or James) Schureman came to this country in company with the Rev. Theodorus Jacobus Frielinghuysen, from Holland in 1719.

He is said to have been a man "respectable for his literary acquirements, as well as for his piety."

He wrote verse, and tradition says that he used his rhythmic talents effectively in the defense of his pastor Frielinghuysen, whose earnest evangelical preaching seems to have made him enemies. He also taught a school in the Netherland language.

His wife was Antje, daughter of Albert Terhune, of Flatbush, Long Island. Their son, John Schureman, was a merchant in New Brunswick, New Jersey. He held many places of prominence and trust in the community. Was frequently elected to the Legislature and was a Judge of the County Court. He was also a member of the Committee of Safety appointed by the Provincial Congress of New Jersey to exercise the powers of the Congress, during their recess, from August 5, 1775, to September 20th.

He was a man of deep piety and great benevolence. He married Ann De Remere, widow of Peter Stryker.

James, son of John Schureman, was a graduate of Queens College, (now Rutgers College) in 1775, and was 2nd Lieutenant, in Colonel John Neilson's Battalion of minute men, January 10, 1776. A member of the Continental Congress from New Jersey 1786-1788, also a member of the Provincial Congress of New Jersey in 1786.

He was elected to the first Congress of the United States as a Federalist, and served from March 4, 1789, to March 3, 1791.

He succeeded John Rutherford as United States Senator, and subsequently was Mayor of New Brunswick.

He married Eleanor, daughter of David Williamson and Eleanor Schuyler. Their daughter Margaret married her cousin, David Schureman Nevius, a descendant of Johannes Nevius, who came to

New Amsterdam, probably from Solingen, Westphalia. Bans of marriage with Ararentje Blyck from Batavia, East Indies, were published November 18, 1653.

James Schureman Nevius, son of David and Margaret Nevius, married, December 21, 1837, Hannah Bowne. They had several children. Their eldest son, the Hon. Henry Martin Nevius, of Red Bank, New Jersey, was a gallant soldier in the Civil War. He commanded the centre of the little band of heroes which resisted successfully Early's attack upon the City of Washington. In the engagement his left arm was shattered by a bullet, and that same night President Lincoln made him a Major.

(See "Schureman Genealogy.")

Margaret Schureman Nevius, a sister of the above mentioned Henry Martin Nevius, married John Woodhull, of Freehold, New Jersey.

NOTE Hh.—SPOFFORD.

The Spofforth, or Spofford family is very ancient. Before the Conquest, Granalban de Spofford was lord of the Manor of Spofforth, and held large possessions in Yorkshire, a list of which may be seen in Domesday Book.

The name has been variously spelled, Spawford, Spofforth, Spafford and Spofford.

Sarah, only child of Captain George Spofford, of the Royal Navy, was step-daughter of the celebrated divine the Rev. Gilbert Tennent, D. D., first pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia, as Captain Spofford's widow, became the third wife of Gilbert Tennent.

(See Genealogy, No. 46.)

NOTE Ii.—TANGIER SMITH.

The "Tangier" Smiths are descendants of Colonel William Smith, who was born at Newton, near Higham Ferrers, Northamptonshire, England.

He was high in favor with Charles II., and was by his majesty appointed Governor of the royal city of Tangier, Africa, in the year 1675.

It was intended to establish there a colony for trade, but finally the project was abandoned.

After his recall from that distant port, Colonel Smith set sail for America, arriving with his family at New York, August 6, 1686.

In October, 1687, he purchased Little Neck in Brookhaven, Long Island, and in 1689 bought a large tract of land extending from "the country road to South Bay, and from Fireland river to Mastic river."

Colonel Smith was the founder of St. George's Manor. He was a member of the Council of the Province of New York, and at one time its President, he was also a Judge, or Delegate, of the Prerogative Court for the County of Suffolk.

His wife was Martha, daughter of Henry Tunstall, Esq., of Putney, in the County of Surrey, England.

He died at Little Neck, Long Island, February 18, 1705. His descendants have been called "Tangier" Smiths, from the early days to distinguish them from other well known Smiths of the same vicinity. This family has had many worthy representatives.

The Rev. Caleb Smith, a younger brother of Elizabeth Smith, who married the Hon. John Woodhull, of Miller's Place, Long Island, was an eminent scholar and a man of renowned piety.

He married the third daughter of President Jonathan Dickenson, of Princeton, and had three daughters, one of whom married George Green, of New Jersey, and had three sons; another, who married Captain Jonathan Phillips, U. S. A., and had children; and a third daughter, who married the Hon. William Churchill Houston, of the American Congress in Revolutionary times.

NOTE Kk.—THOMPSON-BREWSTER.

John Thompson, the ancestor of the Thompson family of Suffolk County, Long Island, was with Richard Wodhull, Richard Floyd and others, one of the fifty-five original proprietors of the town of Brookhaven.

His wife was Hannah, grand-daughter of Elder William Brewster, the most prominent of the band of Pilgrims who came over in the "Mayflower."

Jonathan Thompson, born October 25, 1710, married, September 30, 1734, Mary, daughter of Richard Wodhull (III.); she was born April 11, 1711. She was first cousin of the distinguished General Nathaniel Woodhull, so active in the Colonial Wars, who met his death at the Battle of Long Island.

(See the Family of Thompson in the "New York Genealogical and Biographical Record," January, 1896.)

Frederick Diodati Thompson, a descendant of the above, resides at Sagtikos Manor, Apple-Tree Wicke, Long Island. He graduated LL. B., at Columbia College, and is the author of a book of travels, "In the track of the Sun," and of numerous magazine articles.

He is a member of the New York Historical Society, Long Island Historical Society, the Knickerbocker and Union Clubs, St. George's Society, Academy of Design, Fraternity of Delta Psi, Sons of the Revolution, Society of Colonial Wars, a member of the Order of the Cincinnati, Knight of the Holy Sepulchre of Jerusalem, Knight of St. Maurice and St. Lazare of Italy, Grand Officer of the Osmanlieh and Grand Officer of the Medjidieh of Turkey.

He has also been recognized as a Count by the authorities of Lucca, Italy, and created an hereditary Roman Count by Pope Leo XIII.

A parchment in the family states that the Diodatis' back to the 14th Century have always been the flower of chivalry.

(See Genealogy, No. 13.)

Elder William Brewster, born in England in 1560, received his education at the University of Cambridge, after which he entered the service of a certain William Davidson, a Courtier of Queen Elizabeth, and her Ambassador in both Scotland and Holland.

Weary of the persecutions which began to oppress the people, Elder Brewster came to the New Country in the "Mayflower" in 1620, and suffered with other brave-hearted colonists "of labour, hunger and watching."

It is said that "his Bible and his arms were equally familiar to him and he was always ready for any duty or suffering to which he was called."

Elder Brewster enjoyed a hearty old age and died April 16, 1644, in the eighty-fourth year of his age.

Had his diffidence permitted him to exercise the pastoral office, it has been said, he would have had more influence; he was, however, renowned for his sincere consistent Christian life.

After his death his books were valued at £43 in silver, as appears by the Colony Record, where a catalogue is preserved.

(See "American Biography," by Jeremy Belnap, D. D., of Boston, July, 1798.)

He had four sons, Love, Wrestling, Jonathan and William; and four daughters, Patience, who married in 1624, Thomas Prince, Governor of Massachusetts; Fear, who married Isaac Allerton; Lucretia and Mary.

Hannah, a grandchild of Elder Brewster, married in 1656, John Thompson, of Setauket, Long Island. Another grandchild, the Rev. Nathaniel Brewster, son of Jonathan, graduated from Harvard in 1642, and settled at Brookhaven, Long Island, as its first pastor in 1665.

(See Thompson's "History of Long Island.")

NOTE Ll.—TOURNEUR.

In his "History of Harlem: Its Origin and Early Annals," James Riker writes thus of the "Woodhull-Tourneur marriage":

"The Governor's License was obtained February 5, 1683, and the nuptials were probably celebrated at Setauket, in the hospitable home of the Woodhulls." (The name at that period was Wodhull.)

Daniel Tourneur was the son of Daniel Tourneur, of Picardy, France; he was born in Holland, but was made "a free denizen of this place and province" (Harlem) by special letters dated January 13, 1672.

(See Genealogy, No. 5.)

NOTE Mm.—VROOM-DELAMATER.

On the paternal side, the lineage of Caroline Mandeville Vroom may be traced to the following families of the Dutch nobility, Van Ness, Vanderburgh, Van de Bogaert (Bogert, Bogart or Bogardus), and Vroom.

"Jans Jansen de Rapalie, or Rapaelji, a Huguenot, from Rochelle, was the common ancestor of all the American family of this name.

He arrived in the ship "Unity" in 1623, and on June 16, 1637, he bought from the Indians a tract of 335 acres in Brooklyn, where the United States Marine Hospital now stands."

The maternal ancestor of the Bogerts was the celebrated Sarah de Rapaelji, born in 1625. She was the first child born in New York, and "Governor Stuyvesant in consideration of this fact, granted her a valley of land near the city." (See Watson's "Annals of Philadelphia," Edition of 1855.)

Another ancestor, Baron Resolve Waldron, though born in Haarlem, Holland, was of English descent. The name of Waldron was borne in the reign of Henry II., A. D., 1157, by Walter Waldron, one of the barons of the time. (See Burke's "Landed Gentry.")

This family was of high repute from the time of the Norman Conquest. (See Riker's "History of Harlem," page 104.) Baron Resolve Waldron was an officer on the staff of Governor Stuyvesant, Embassador to New England, to Virginia and to Lord Baltimore. (See "American Ancestry.") He married Rebecca Hendricks, of Amsterdam, Holland.

The family of Catalina Delamater, (le Maitre, or le Maistre,) mother of Caroline Mandeville Vroom, descended from an ancient house of Brittany, which married into the renowned Arnauld family, whose history is so closely woven with the annals of Port Royal, France. (See Schimmelpenninck's "Annals of Port Royal.")

The le Maistres belonged to the nobility of the "Robe and Sword." (See "Genealogy of Descendants of Claude Le Maitre" (Delamater), by La Fayette De La Mater, Joel Munsell's Sons, Albany, 1882.)

The first Mandeville, or de Manevile, in England, crossed the Channel with William the Conqueror, and had bestowed upon him vast estates. (See "Domesday Book.")

Geoffrey de Mandeville gave to Westminster Abbey, the great Estate of Hyde, and was "the second private person to be buried in the Abbey."

Gellis de Mandeville, the first of the name in America, arrived in the ship "Moesman," in 1659. His home was at the foot of 12th St., called "Thappen Couch," and his farm extended to 21st Street.

The house was standing in 1776, and is shown in old maps in the Historical Society of New York. Gellis and his wife Yoneka Waldron were received as members of the Collegiate Church, in 1677. (See "Collegiate Church Records.")

This Gellis is said to have been the second son of Duke Theodore Mandeville, whose early Norman ancestor was Drago De Monti Acuto, who in the time of the Conquest was in the train of Robert, Earl of Moreton; from this Drago are descended the Montecute, Montague and Mandeville families.

The late Ex-Vice President Schuyler Colfax was in this line of descent. (See "Life of Colfax," by O. J. Hollister, page 13.)

The father of Caroline Mandeville Vroom was a son of Colonel Peter Dumont Vroom and Elsie Bogert. Colonel Vroom raised the first military company in New Jersey in which he served as lieutenant, Captain, Major, and Lieutenant-Colonel.

He led a company at the Battle of Germantown, and saw much active service.

One son, Peter Dumont Vroom, Jr., was Governor of New Jersey, from 1829-1832 and from 1833-1836. Member of Congress 1839-1841, and Minister to Prussia from 1853-1857.

The eldest son of Colonel Peter D. Vroom, Sr., was Guysbert Bogert Vroom, cashier in the Wall Street Bank, New York, for many years.

Though years younger than Alexander Hamilton, that peer of statesmen, prince of financiers, Guysbert B. Vroom was his intimate friend, and one of Hamilton's pall-bearers.

A tiny gold brooch containing a lock of Hamilton's hair, lettered upon the back, "A. H. to G. B. V.," is in the possession of George Augustus Vroom, of Hackensack, New Jersey.

(See Genealogy, No. 312.)

NOTE Nn.—WIKOFF-SCUDDER.

The first ancestor of the Wyckoff family in America was Pieter Claez Wyckoff, who came from Holland to this country, in the year 1636, and settled at Flatlands, Long Island.

He was Magistrate of this town in 1662, and his name appears as one of the patentees in the town charter in 1667 and 1686.

His wife was Guetie, daughter of Hendrick Van Ness. Their sons were Claes, or Claez, Hendrick, Cornelius and Pieter.

The name for several generations has been spelled Wikoff in New Jersey. Several of the Monmouth County Wikoffs did good service in the Revolutionary War.

Auke Wikoff was Lieutenant Colonel, 3rd Regiment, Monmouth, July 23, 1776, Colonel of same regiment, and prisoner of war September, 1780.

Peter Wikoff was Captain First Battalion, Somerset.

(See "Jerseymen in the Revolutionary War.")
(See Genealogy, No. 138.) (See Genealogy, No. 139.)
(See Genealogy, No. 306.)

Rev. Henry Scudder, of Colingborne, Wiltshire, England, a graduate of Christ College, Cambridge, was distinguished both as a preacher and as an author.

He presided at the Committee of Clergymen appointed by Charles I., at Westminster Abbey, in 1643.

One of his works, "The Christian's Daily Walk," has received high praise from men of intellect and culture.

Thomas Scudder, (supposed to be his son), came to America in 1635. John, son of Thomas, married Mary, eldest daughter of William and Dorothy King, and removed to Long Island.

Jacob Scudder, son of Benjamin, was born November 29, 1707, in Huntington, Long Island. He married, August 5, 1731, Abia Rowe. Colonel Nathaniel was the son of Jacob Scudder; he was born in Huntington, Long Island. Graduated from the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University) in 1751, and was afterwards a Trustee of the College.

He was a physician of high repute; a Member of the Provincial Continental Congress from 1777 to 1779; a member of the New York Legislature, Speaker of the House, and also a member of the Committee of Safety.

The Articles of Confederation on the part and behalf of the State of New Jersey, were signed by the names of John Witherspoon, and Nathaniel Scudder, November 26, 1778.

At the legislative meeting held at Princeton, November 20, 1777, the Rev. John Witherspoon, D. D., President of the college, Colonel Nathaniel Scudder, M. D., and Elias Boudinot, with two others, were selected to represent the State in the National Congress.

Colonel Nathaniel Scudder, M. D., married in 1752, Isabella, daughter of Colonel Kenneth Anderson, son of the Hon. John Anderson, who came from Scotland to South Amboy about 1725.

The Hon. John Anderson married Anne, daughter of John Reed, Surveyor-General of the Province of New Jersey.

A notice in an Amboy paper of March 30, 1736, reads as follows: "March 27, died here in his 71st year, Hon. John Anderson, President of his Majesty's Council and Commander-in-Chief of this Province of New Jersey, a gentleman of the strictest honor and integrity, greatly valued, and lamented by all."

In his father's will, Kenneth was left "a scymetar and gold signet-ring."

(See Cooley's "Genealogy of Early Settlers in Trenton and Ewing.")

The children of Colonel Nathaniel Scudder, M. D., were John Anderson, Joseph, Kenneth, Lydia, and Hannah.

Hannah Scudder married Captain William Wikoff, of Monmouth County, New Jersey. Their daughter, Ann Wikoff, married John Woodhull, M. D., son of the Rev. John Woodhull, D. D.

Colonel Nathaniel Scudder met his death in an engagement at Black Point, near Shrewsbury, Monmouth County, New Jersey, October 16, 1781. A fine old slab in the historic "old Tennent" Churchyard reads thus:

Memory of
The Honorable
Nathaniel Scudder who fell in defence of his country
Oct. the 16th, 1781, aged 48 years.

(See Biographical Sketch of Rev. John Woodhull, D. D., XIII.)

NOTE Pp.—WOODHULL BALLAD.

(Published in the London Mirror in 1823.)

Stay! traveller, stay! and hear me tell
A gallant soldier's fate!
'Twas on this spot brave Woodhull fell
Sad story to relate!

A stout brigade was his command,
Of Suffolk's sons compos'd;
Thus far he led his patriot band,
And here his life he clos'd;

That time Lord Howe, from Gravesend Bay,
His banner bold advanced,
On that same dark and doubtful day,
In evil hour it chanc'd

That Suffolk's raw, new levied force,
Surpris'd and overthrown,
By sudden charge of furious horse,
Took flight and left alone

Their chief expos'd on battle field,
Without a troop or guard,
For him to raise protecting shield
'Gainst Britain's vengeful sword!

He saw the desp'rate day was lost,
He saw himself betray'd;
Not one remained of all his host
To lend him needful aid;

Forthwith fierce horsemen, gath'ring round,
Cut off all hope of flight;
And soon his single arm he found
With fearful odds must fight;

Full twenty foes about his head
Their glittering sabres flung,
And down, on his uplifted blade,
Swift blows descending rung!

But soon he ceas'd such fruitless strife,
And now for quarter cried,
Yet vainly begg'd a prisoner's life,
For thus the foe replied:

"Who will not say, 'God save the King,'
No mercy he shall find;
These are the terms from George we bring;
Art thou to these inclin'd?

"If thou wilt straight pronounce these words,
We grant thy traitor's prayer,
And, peaceful sheathed, our loyal swords
Thy rebel life shall spare.

"But if this offer thou refuse,
Thy doom is instant death;
Then speak, thy life to save or lose
It hangs on thy next breath!"

The chief, indignant, answering, spake,
"Your mercy then I spurn,
On such base terms my life to take,
Proud haughty foe I scorn!

"I freely say 'God save us all,'
Those words include your King;
If more ye ask, then must I fall,
Nought else from me ye'll wring."

"No! rebel, no! 'tis not enough,"
On ev'ry side he heard;
"And since thou art such stubborn stuff,
Lo, thus we keep our word!"

Then straightway, show'ring thick as hail,
Their cruel blows they dealt,
Their countless weapons fiercely fell,
And many an edge he felt!

Yet still he held his trusty sword
Upraised above his head,
And feebly strove his life to guard
While he profusely bled!

"God save the King," the horsemen said,
At every stroke they gave;
"God save us all," he faintly cried,
"And me, a sinner save!"

Till gashed with many a gaping wound
At length they smote him dead,
And, prostrate stretched upon the ground,
His generous spirit fled!

A more heroic, gallant end,
No age nor clime can boast!
Yet history ne'er the tale hath penned
And but for me 't were lost!

Had he thus died for ancient Rome,
His now forgotten name,
By poet's page, and sculptured tomb,
Had well been known to Fame!

STRONG—CRUGER.

(Too late for classification.)

The Strong Family of England was originally located in the County of Shropshire. The name is stated in one record, on what authority is not known, to have been originally McStrachan, and to have gone through the following changes, viz.: McStrachan, Strachan, Strachn, Strong.

One of the family married an heiress of Griffiths, of County of Caernarvon, Wales, and went thither to reside in 1545.

Richard Strong, first generation, was of this branch of the family, and was born in the County of Caernarvon, Wales, 1561. In 1590 he removed to Taunton, Somersetshire, England, where he died in 1613, leaving a son John, then 8 years of age, and a daughter Eleanor.

John Strong, born in Taunton, England, 1605, died at Northampton, Massachusetts, April 14, 1699. From Taunton he removed to London, and afterwards to Plymouth, from which latter point he sailed on the ship "Mary and John," March 20, 1630. He married, in December, 1630, his second wife, Abigail Ford, of Dorchester, Massachusetts. She died the mother of 16 children, July 6, 1688, aged about 80 years.

Elder John Strong, founder of Dorchester, Hingham and Taunton, took the Freeman's Oath at Boston, March 9, 1636, Freeman of Plymouth County in 1638; Deputy from Taunton General Court in Plymouth, 1641-3-4; Founder of Windsor. Moved to Northampton in 1659. His first wife, name unknown, he married in England, she dying immediately on landing in this country, leaving two children, the younger of which died within two months of its mother.

Thomas Strong, eldest son of Elder John Strong and Abigail Ford, his wife, was born in Dorchester, 163–, and died October 3, 1689.

He married, December 5, 1660, Mary Hewett, who died February 20, 1670-1, leaving five children. He married, October 10, 1671, his second wife, Rachel Holton. They had eleven children.

Selah Strong, their son, born at Northampton, Massachusetts, December 23, 1680, died April 8, 1732. He married, June 23, 1702, Abigail Terry, of Southold, Long Island, who died February 2, 1761.

Selah Strong, (2nd,), their son, born at Setauket, Long Island, February 23, 1713-14, married, October 7, 1740, Hannah Woodhull, daughter of Nathaniel Woodhull and Sarah Smith. She was born February 25, 1718.

They settled at Blooming Grove, New York.

(See Genealogy, No. 20.)

Major Nathaniel Strong, son of Selah Strong, (2nd,), was born November 18, 1737, probably at Brookhaven, Long Island. Murdered by Tories in his house, at Blooming Grove, Orange County, New York, November 18, 1778. He was Major in Colonel Jesse Woodhull's regiment. He married Amy Brewster, who was born about the year 1741.

Selah Strong, (3rd,), son of Major Nathaniel Strong, married Ruth Woodhull, daughter of Captain Ebenezer Woodhull and Abigail Howell.

Schuyler Strong, son of Selah Strong, (3rd,), married Frances Minerva Cruger.

(See Genealogy, No. 81.)

The ancestors of the Crugers, were Huguenots, the original name was Crieger. They escaped from France during the massacre of St. Bartholomew.

Some reached England in safety, others found a refuge at Altona, in the Duchy of Holstein.

Daniel Cruger, born in Altona, came to America in the year 1768, and settled at Sunbury, Pa. He married Elizabeth Wheaton, of New Jersey.

Daniel Cruger, Jr., (General,), born December 22, 1780, married, February 11, 1805 or 1806, Hannah, daughter of Joseph Thorne Clement. She was a descendant of the famous Captain John Underhill, and his second wife, Elizabeth Feake. Her mother was Frances, daughter of Absalom Townsend and Helen De Kay.

General Daniel Cruger married second, Lydia Boggs Shepherd (widow of Colonel Moses Shepherd).

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH II.

Richard Woodhull, (II.), (Hon.), second generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of Richard and Deborah Wodhull. He was born October 9, 1649.

He married, August 19, 1680, Temperance, daughter of the Rev. Jonah Fordham, of Southampton, Long Island. He inherited the paternal estate.

In 1678 he was a Justice of the Honorable Court of Assize, and was Colonial Captain in the King's Troops in 1685.

"His knowledge and upright character endeared him to the people and he died greatly lamented."

He had six children, two daughters and four sons.

He died October 18, 1699.

(See Genealogy, No. 2.)

In his will dated October 13, 1699, mention is made of his "beloved wife, Temperance," and of their children.

(See Genealogical Appendix, Note Oo.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH III.

Richard Wodhull, (III.), (Hon.), third generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of Richard Wodhull II., and Temperance Fordham. He was born November 2, 1691.

He inherited his father's estate and, like his father, was a Magistrate for many years; he was usually styled "Justice Wodhull."

He married Mary, daughter of John Homan; they had two daughters and five sons.

Like his father and grandfather before him, Richard Wodhull III., lived the life of a cultured gentleman.

He died November 24, 1767, his wife surviving his loss but a year.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH IV.

Richard Woodhull, (IV.), (Hon.), fourth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of Richard Wodhull III., and Mary Homan. He was born October 11, 1712, and inherited the paternal estate at Setauket, Long Island.

In the year 1763 he was one of his Majesty's Judges of the Court of Common Pleas.

He married in the year 1738, Margaret, daughter of Edward Smith, of the "Bull Smith" family, of Long Island.

He died October 13, 1788, survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters.

(See Genealogy, No. 14.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH V.

John Woodhull, (Hon.), fourth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the second son of Richard Wodhull III., and Mary Homan. He was born January 15, 1719.

In 1740 he purchased an estate at Miller's Place, Long Island. He was Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in 1763, and was "a gentleman of wealth, probity and distinction."

In 1775 he signed the famous "Associators" oath, viz: "Persuaded that the salvation of the Rights and Liberties of America depend under God, on the firm union of its inhabitants. We, the Freemen inhabitants etc. etc.—being greatly alarmed at the avowed design of the Ministry, to raise a revenue in America, and shocked by the bloody scene now acting in Massachusetts Bay. Do resolve never to become slaves—and do associate—to carry into execution, whatever measures may be recommended by the Continental Congress and opposing the execution of the several arbitrary acts of the British Parliament."

He was also the Chairman of the "Joint Committee of Brookhaven," which on May 13, 1776, met "to institute proceedings against (certain) Tories."

He married, November 27, 1740, Elizabeth, daughter of Major William Henry Smith, of the "Tangier Smith" family, of Long Island.

They had eight sons and one daughter, Elizabeth, (who married Samuel Hopkins.) He died January 3, 1794.

(See Genealogy, No. 15.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH VI.

Nathan Woodhull, (Captain), fourth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the third son of Richard Wodhull III., and Mary Homan. He was born July 15, 1720.

He served in the Continental Army; was a member of the First Constitutional Convention of the State of New York, 1777; Surrogate of Suffolk County, New York, 1780.

He married, for his first wife, Joanna, daughter of Isaac Mills, by whom he had three sons and three daughters. His second wife was Elizabeth Smith.

He died at Setauket, Long Island, where he had spent his life as a merchant, October 27, 1804.

DE SILLE HOUSE,

Where General Nathaniel Woodhull died.

Biographical Sketch VII.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH VII.

Nathaniel Woodhull, (General), fourth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of Nathaniel Wodhull and Sarah Smith. He was born at St. George's Manor, Mastic, Long Island, December 30, 1722.

His early life was spent in assisting his father to cultivate the possessions he had inherited.

His first public employment was in a military capacity in the war between Great Britain and France 1754-1760.

He was appointed Major in the Provincial forces of New York, and served as such in the army under General Abercrombie, intended for the reduction of Ticonderoga and Crown Point, and distinguished himself by his daring and bravery in the assault on Ticonderoga.

"Major Nathaniel Woodhull, of Suffolk, and Major Richard Hewlett, of Queens, with six hundred and sixty-eight men under Captain Bradstreet captured Fort Frontenac, June, 1758."

In the year 1760 he served as Colonel of the Third Regiment, New York Provincials, under General Jeffrey Amherst, which marched against Montreal and effected the final reduction of Canada.

The original journal kept by Colonel Woodhull, written during the memorable expeditions against Montreal, is in the possession of one of his descendants at Mastic, Long Island. It was published in Boston in the year 1760, under the title of "All Canada in the Hands of the English."

(For brief extracts of which, see Genealogical Appendix, Note I.)

Colonel Woodhull was a representative from Suffolk County, New York, in the Colonial Assembly in 1769, and "for the six consecutive years which preceded the Revolution, one of the ablest opponents of the colonial government. In connection with George Clinton and General Schuyler, General Woodhull assisted to bring about the crisis which inaugurated the Revolution in this Colony."

He was appointed by the Provincial Congress August 22, 1775, Brigadier-General of the Militia of Suffolk and Queens Counties, Long Island.

On the 28th of August, 1775—General Woodhull was elected President of the Provincial Congress of New York, in which body sat Jay, Livingston, Benson and Schuyler, and he also held the same office in the Congress that succeeded July 9th, 1776, under the new form of government.

On August 25th, 1776, he was appointed to the command of the Militia at Jamaica.

Owing to what has been defined as the "unskilful generalship of the Provincial Congress," there followed, "the catastrophe of a divided command." It has been well said, "the nature of the service in which General Woodhull was employed and the force placed under him were alike unworthy of his command. He had more military experience than most of the officers of the Revolutionary Army, and no one in this State promised to make a better general officer."

In preparing to carry out the orders of Congress, it is evident that he knew himself and his men to be in a perilous strait.

He wrote, "I am now at Jamaica, with less than one hundred men. I will continue here as long as I can, in hopes of a re-inforcement."

(See "Letter to Provincial Congress," Genealogical Appendix, Note V.)

It was General Washington's hope to re-inforce Woodhull by a detachment of a thousand men from Connecticut under Trumbull.

(See "Washington's letter to Congress," Genealogical Appendix, Note W.)

It has been said of him, "he adopted the course which his own delicate sense of honor dictated," and, "it was only after his assurance that aid could not possibly reach him that he abandoned his post of duty."

Seemingly unconscious of any personal danger, General Woodhull returned to his headquarters at the Inn of Increase Carpenter, where it is said, "he tied his horse to the rail-fence, entered the old Dutch farm-house, and had just seated himself, when the dragoons of Delancey's 17th British Regiment rode up to the Inn door.

"The General suddenly aroused by the sound of horses' hoofs, (which he seems not to have heard until they were at the door, owing to the noise of the elements, a fierce thunder storm having arisen) sprang to a side door, and was out of the house in an instant. He was about to clear the rail-fence to reach his horse, when some of the dismounted dragoons intercepted and captured him."

To quote once again, "The scene of sickening murder which followed is scarcely paralleled in history since civilization forbade the slaughter of prisoners as the privilege of a conqueror.

"The wretched and cowardly officer, who first reached the General has had the rare good fortune to have a strange obscurity thrown over his identity. The ruffian, whoever he was, approached the General with the exclamation, 'Surrender you damned rebel!' upon which Woodhull at once tendered him his sword.

"This, however, was not enough, for with uplifted sword, the British officer advanced furiously exclaiming, 'Say, God save the King.'

"In accents of dignity and courage, General Woodhull replied, 'God save us all.' 'Say, God save the King,' shouted the brutal officer. Whereupon he aimed the swift blows of his sabre at the defenceless head of the General."

It is said on good authority that the wounds received by Woodhull were ten in number, seven deep gashes on his arm, nearly severing it in two places from his body, and three wounds on his head.

In this pitiful condition, he was mounted behind one of the British troopers, and hurried to Jamaica, the men fearing an interception from Woodhull's force.

Arriving at the village, one account declares that a British surgeon dressed the General's wounds "with much kindness and skill," while other accounts declare that he was fearfully neglected, both then and later.

As a prisoner of war he with others, was then removed to the New Utrecht Church, "which was unceremoniously used as a prison" by the British. Again he was removed, this time to the wretched quarters of a prison-ship, where witnesses declared he was left in a pitiable condition dying from neglect and lack of care.

Colonel Troop, later a personal friend and associate of Hamilton and Jay, testified to the horrors of the prison-ship and the indignities showered upon the dying General. Not until they knew his life was fast ebbing away, did the inhuman officers of the ship permit his removal to the De Sille house, adjacent to the New Utrecht Church.

Here he was permitted the blessings of his wife's gentle ministrations, and the care which earlier permitted, might have saved his life.

"With his dying breath he greeted his beloved wife (Ruth, daughter of the Hon. Nicoll Floyd, and sister of General William Floyd, one of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence), and then calmly directed that the needs of the American prisoners, then in an almost starving condition, should be supplied by his wife with money and provisions.

"With these words of noble self-forgetfulness upon his lips, the spirit of Nathaniel Woodhull took its flight."

It is said that one of the battalions that was employed in the inglorious warfare against an unresisting individual was commanded by Major Crewe, a distant kinsman of General Woodhull, and that when he came to be apprised of the circumstances of the case, he was so disgusted that he either resigned his commission and quit the service, or obtained permission to leave the army and returned to England.

As it has been questioned whether or not there was a British officer of the name of Crewe serving in the Revolutionary War, see "British Officers Serving in the American Revolution" 1774-1783. Compiled by Worthington Chauncey Ford, published 1897, for the following:

"Richard Crewe, Captain of 17th Dragoons, July 11, 1769. Major of 17th Dragoons, February 25, 1776."

Field says of the subject of this sketch: "The high station which he had held in the councils of the revolutionists, the grand moderation of his character, combined with the firmness, patriotism and self-devotion for which he was remarkable, would under any circumstances have given him an honorable reputation. But when the acts of his pure life were crowned with the final sacrifice of martyrdom, General Woodhull's name was enrolled among his country's noblest heroes."

Another declares, "The capture of General Woodhull was one of the most calamitous events of the Revolution.

"It deprived the country of the talents, the experience, and counsels of one of the ablest and most patriotic of her citizens.

"His death spread a gloom over Long Island, and his memory will be cherished among their fondest recollections."

And still another says, "The most tragical event of the Battle of Long Island, was far away in Jamaica Village. The life of Woodhull, always brave and manly and efficient, was the most precious sacrifice Long Island could offer on the altar of our liberties."

A Middlesex (London) Journal of 1776 says, "We were greatly shocked at the massacre made by the Highlanders after victory was declared."

In 1823 a poem appeared in the London Mirror, on the subject of General Woodhull's death, which although in parts, historically incorrect, will be of interest to those who bear his name.

(See Genealogical Appendix, Note Pp.)

In 1849 a tragedy was written by Mr. Lester upon his death, also the following ballad written by Epes Sargent, was published in the New York National Advocate, February 28, 1821.

WOODHULL.

'Twas when Long Island's heights beheld the King's invading horde,
That, by outnumbered foes compelled, our chief gave up his sword.
Then spoke the victor: "Now from me no mercy shall you wring, Unless, base rebel, on your knee, you cry, 'God save the King.'"
With reverent, but undaunted, tone then Woodhull made reply:
"No King I own, save one alone, the Lord of earth and sky,
But far from me the wish that ill your monarch should befall;
So freely, and with right good-will, I'll say: 'God save us all.'" Shouted the foeman: "Paltering slave, repeat, without delay,
'God save the King,' nor longer brave the fury that can slay."
But Woodhull said: "Unarmed I hear; yet threats cannot appal Ne'er pass these lips the breath of fear, and so—God save us all."
"Then rebel rue thy stubborn will," the ruffian victor cried;
"This weapon shall my threat fulfil; so perish in thy pride."
Rapid as thought the murderous blow fell on the prisoner's head;
With warrior rage he scanned his foe, then staggering, sank and bled,
But anger vanished with his fall; his heart the wrong forgave;
Dying, he sighed, "God save you all, and me, a sinner, save."

The inscription on his tombstone is as follows:—

In Memory of

Gen'l Nathaniel Woodhull

Who, wounded and a prisoner. Died on the 20th, of September 1776.

In the 54th, year of his age.

Regretted by all who knew how to value his many private virtues, and that pure zeal, for the rights of his country, to which he perished a victim.

In 1784 General Woodhull's old home-stead at Mastic was destroyed by fire, the only things saved being his swords and regimentals, his military chest, personal correspondence, a silver tankard, a Family and Farm Journal, the Journal of his Military Campaign, and his Commission as Colonel.

The De Sille house where the wounded General died, has disappeared since 1850, at which time it was nearly two hundred years old.

His widow, and only daughter Elizabeth, survived the General, the latter becoming the wife of Henry Nicoll, Esq.

(See Genealogy, No. 22.)

Their descendants occupy the home-stead built soon after the conflagration, upon the site of the original one.

The Woodhull Memorial.

At a meeting held in January, 1904, at the earnest suggestion of Mr. William Nagle, of Hollis, Long Island, a committee was formed consisting of Messrs. F. W. Dunton, John A. Loope and William Nagle to erect a monument to the memory of General Nathaniel Woodhull on the Public School lawn.

On May 30, 1904, the people of Hollis, together with many outsiders, assembled for the purpose of dedicating the monument, the dedication exercises being preceded by a parade of the school children and local organizations.

At the conclusion of the parade the column came to a halt beside the monument—a thirty pound Parrott gun presented by the United States Government, mounted on a granite block bearing the name "Woodhull" together with a suitable inscription.

The dedicatory exercises were opened with an invocation by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Burgess of the Diocese of Long Island, who was followed by Frederick W. Dunton, the founder of Hollis, who gave a brief review of the twenty years' history of the town.

At the conclusion of Mr. Dunton's address, the school children and those assembled sang a song to the tune of "My Maryland," written in honor of the memory of General Woodhull, after which Mr. George A. Nagle, on behalf of the people of Hollis, made the presentation of the monument in a stirring forceful speech.

This was responded to by Archdeacon Henry B. Bryan, on behalf of the American nation, who spoke in an entertaining and pleasing manner.

The oration of the day followed, and was delivered by Ex-Congressman James W. Covert, who reviewed the career of General Woodhull, paying a warm tribute to his patriotism and valor.

During the memorial exercises, John A. Loope introduced Mr. Jesse Calvin Woodhull, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who in a few well chosen words presented to the Hollis Public School, a handsome picture of the old De Sille House at New Utrecht, where General Woodhull died from his wounds.

The exercises were closed by the singing of "America."

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH VIII.

Richard Woodhull, fourth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the second son of Nathaniel Wodhull and Sarah, daughter of Richard Smith, (2nd,), of Smithtown, Long Island.

He was born May 22, 1729, and graduated from Yale College in 1752. He officiated as tutor in the college from April, 1756, to September, 1761.

He was admitted to the bar of New Haven County, November, 1762, but was recalled the next March to the position which he so ably filled, "his proficiency in mathematical and scientific studies making him particularly valuable as a teacher."

About this time, however, he became imbued with the doctrine of Robert Sandeman, which obliged him to be "a non-resistant in the Revolution," and in consequence of this, was obliged by President Clapp, of Yale, to resign.

He taught in the Hopkins Grammar School from 1782 to 1785. Professor Kingsley said of him, "He enjoyed a high reputation for his attainments in all the branches of collegiate learning, but was particularly distinguished in the department of mathematics."

President Dwight described him as "a man of extensive and varied learning, generally reserved, but when drawn into conversation highly interesting."

He married four times. He died in New Haven, Conn., in his home at Elm and Church Sts., which he purchased in 1765, December 7, 1797, in his sixty-ninth year.

His fourth wife survived him, as did an only daughter.

(See Genealogy, No. 25.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH IX.

Jesse Woodhull, (Colonel), fourth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the third son of Nathaniel Wodhull and Sarah Smith, and a brother of General Nathaniel Woodhull.

He was born at Mastic, Long Island, February 10, 1735, and settled in Orange County, New York, about the year 1753, purchasing a tract of 500 acres at Blagg's Cove, in the town of Blooming Grove (formerly a part of Cornwall, New York.)

He was a leading man in the County before the Revolution, and was conspicuous in all the public events that led up to it. He was a delegate to the first Provincial Convention, April 20, 1775. Raised the first regiment in Cornwall and bore a prominent part in the exciting events which took place along the banks of the Hudson especially in the autumn of 1777.

About September 20, of the same year, General Howe was marching into the City of Philadelphia, Burgoyne already in Saratoga, when a force of British soldiers, three thousand strong, entered New York, joined Sir Henry Clinton, and a few days later started up the Hudson.

By feigning an attack on Peekskill, the force of the enemy crossed the river to Stony Point, marched around the Western base of the Dunderburg and on October 7, appeared before the forts. The militia of the district (about 600 in number, hastily called in the day previous) united with the garrison, making a most heroic defense, fighting against superior numbers until twilight, when they gave way and made a scattered retreat, leaving about 300 of their number in killed, wounded and prisoners.

In this encounter Colonel Woodhull's regiment suffered severely, but in this, as in succeeding events, he was a conspicuous leader.

After the massacre of the inhabitants at Minisink by the Indians, July 22, 1779, detachments from Woodhull's, Allison's and Hathorn's regiments were immediately sent to guard the frontier from further incursion.

In his report to Governor Clinton, Colonel Hathorn wrote: "I have acquiesced with Colonel Woodhull in ordering one-eighth of our Regiments to Minisink as a temporary guard until your Excellency's pleasure is known on the subject."

Colonel Woodhull continued in active service until the close of the war, and afterward became prominent in the political affairs of Orange County. He was a graduate of Yale College, and well qualified for the various positions of trust he was called upon to fill.

He was a member of the State Convention that ratified the Federal Constitution, June 17, 1788; and a member of the first Senate, being associated with Philip Livingston, John Morin Scott, William Floyd, Abraham Yates, Jr., Pierre Van Cortland, Jonathan Lawrence, and other distinguished men of that period. (See Whittemore's "Heroes of the American Revolution.")

In 1753 he married Hester, daughter of Nathaniel Du Bois. They had four sons and three daughters.

He died in Orange County, New York, February 14, 1795.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH X.

Richard Woodhull, (V.), (Hon.), fifth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of Richard Woodhull IV., and Margaret Smith. He was born June 3, 1741.

He was one of his Majesty's Justices of the Court of Common Pleas in 1763.

He is credited with having first built and owned "Brighton

House" at Perth Amboy, as a residence. New Jersey records show that this could not have been, as said Colonial Mansion was used by the Proprietors of the Province of New Jersey, as an official residence.

It is possible, that Richard Woodhull may have occupied it from 1771 to 1774, between the time of its occupancy by Chief Justice Smyth and Governor William Franklin, but so far as is known "Brighton House" did not become private property until after the Revolutionary War.

Richard Woodhull married, July 11, 1768, Sarah, daughter of Richard Miller and Dorothy Woodhull, of Miller's Place, Long Island.

He died January 16, 1774.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XI.

William Woodhull, (Rev.), fifth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of the Hon. John Woodhull and Elizabeth Smith, of Miller's Place, Long Island.

He was born December 3, 1741; was graduated from the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University) in 1764, and studied theology with that eminent divine, the Rev. Samuel Buell of East Hampton, Long Island.

He was a signer of the "Associator's Oath" in 1775; and a Chairman of the "Joint Committee of Safety" at Brookhaven, in 1776.

He filled the pulpit at Brookhaven, Long Island, and in September, 1768, accepted a call from the Black River (now Chester, Morris County, New Jersey) congregation.

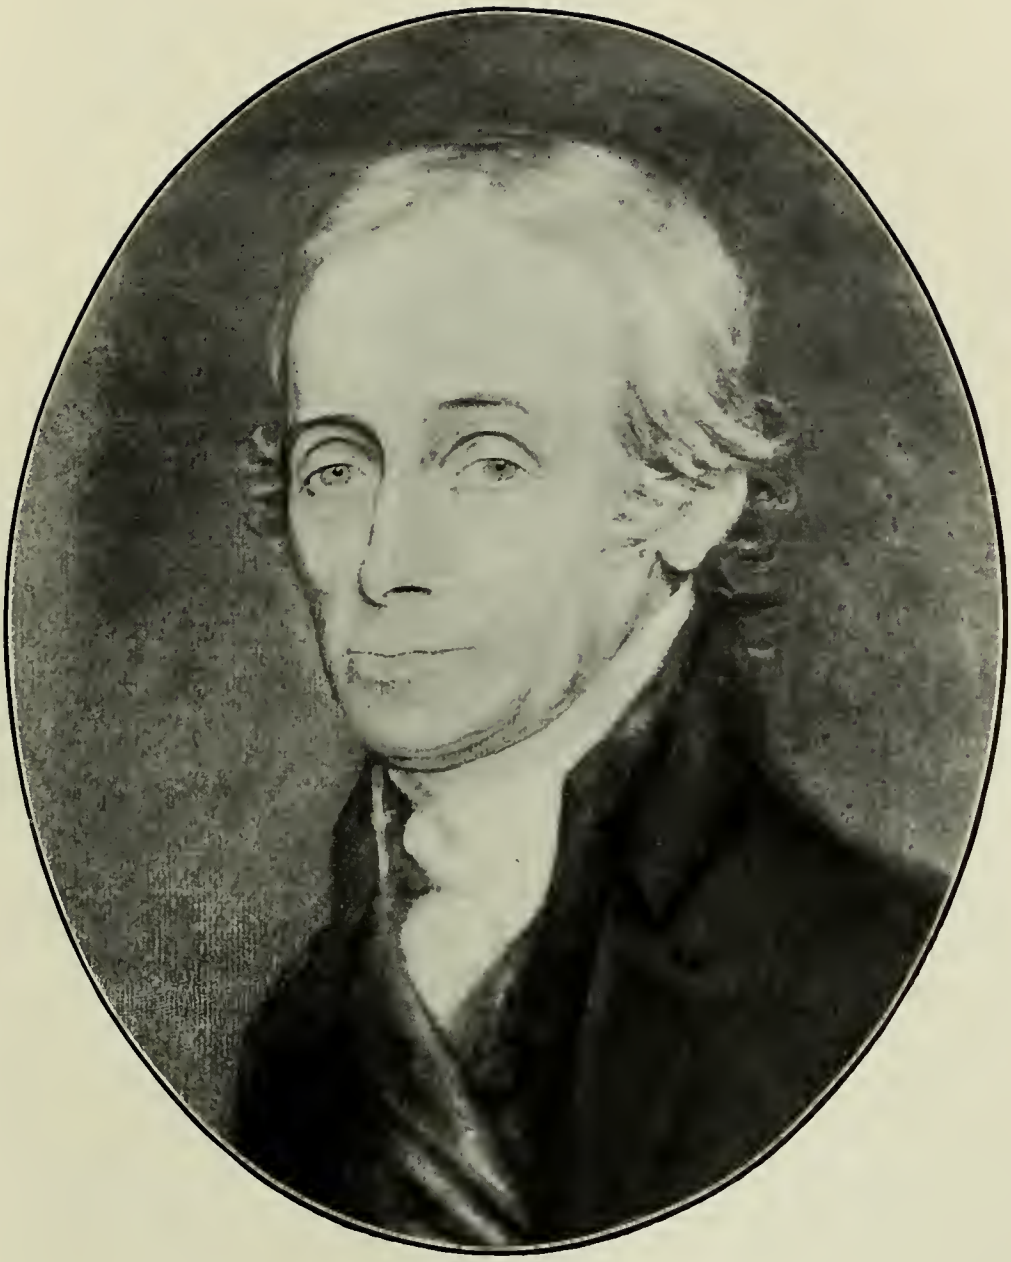
He travelled from Long Island to Chester on horseback, his wife and child riding on the horse behind him. His pastorate was a brief one, for in the course of a few years, he was forced to give up preaching owing to a weakness of the throat. He however continued to be of service to the community in which he lived, and occupied more than one position of honor and importance.

He became a Judge of the Circuit Court of New Jersey, and taught a classical school until the breaking out of the Revolutionary War. He was renowned for his patriotism having "preached it from the pulpit," as well as "repeatedly representing his people in the Provincial Congress."

In 1783 the Presbytery of New York reported that they had left out the name of the Rev. William Woodhull from their list of members, because on account of feeble health he had relinquished his ministerial duties.

The Synod, however, deeming this to be an insufficient reason, directed his name to be restored to the roll.

One who has read his extant sermons declares them to be ably and agreeably written. He was a man who did much to mold the sentiment and thought of the community in which he lived.



WILLIAM WOODHULL, Rev.

Biographical Sketch XI.

In 1787 he was a member of the Convention which framed the first Constitution of New Jersey.

He married, May 3, 1767, Elizabeth, daughter of William Hedges, of Easthampton, Long Island. He died October 24, 1824, and was buried on Pleasant Hill.

He had ten children, five sons and five daughters, all but one of whom married.

(See Genealogy, No. 45.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XII.

Ebenezer Woodhull, (Captain), fourth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the fourth son of Nathaniel Wodhull and Sarah Smith. He was born at Mastic, Long Island, February 2, 1742.

In January, 1776, he was commissioned Adjutant of a Regiment of Minute Men, and in May of the same year, was made Captain of Light Horse Troop, Cornwall Precinct Regiment.

He was an influential citizen of Orange County, New York, having lived many years in Blooming Grove, in that County.

He was a brave and capable officer and, above all else, a true-hearted patriot, as were his brothers, General Nathaniel and Colonel Jesse Woodhull.

"Being one of the early settlers of Blooming Grove, he took so active a part during the Revolutionary War, that he incurred the hatred of the notorious British spy, Claudius Smith, who threatened his life and even went so far as to visit Captain Woodhull's house with the intent to kill him.

"Upon this occasion, the redoubtable Captain was fortunately away at Clarkston. To vent his spite, the disappointed spy took the occasion to carry off all the valuables he could lay hands upon, swearing he would 'kill him yet.'

"Mrs. Woodhull (who was Abigail, daughter of Hezekiah Howell), had fortunately been warned by a faithful slave of the approach of the marauder and his men, and managed to hide a silver tankard under the sleeping baby in its cradle, as well as to slip some silver spoons into a convenient pocket.

"When Claudius Smith and his comrades broke into the house they discovered a spoon that had been overlooked, and demanding the rest of the silver, ordered the lady of the house to 'take up that child.'

"Mrs. Woodhull acquiesced, exclaiming in true woman fashion, 'my tankard is gone!' The robbers also took everything in the way of jewelry that the house contained, excepting a little carnelian ring, which was overlooked.

"When the men began ransacking the clothing she pleaded that her scarlet cloak be left her. The spy cavalierly remarked, 'Put a bed blanket round you.' When Captain Woodhull's little daughter Fanny asked if he was going to take her 'new calico frock' the spy replied that he would not, if she would show him which it was.

"The Captain's uniform was next demanded, this his wife tried to save by stratagem, but a slave, fearing for the life of her mistress, said, 'You know missy you put it between the feather beds.'

"Just before the men left the house, Mrs. Woodhull was ordered not to look out the window, a command which of course she did not obey, and by the clear moonlight easily saw them ride off in the direction of Major Strong's house, and before long, heard the fatal gun shots which ended that brave man's career.

"Claudius was afterward captured, and when on trial in the town of Goshen did his utmost to keep Mrs. Woodhull from testifying against him; not succeeding in this he glared at her fiercely, exclaiming with bravado, 'You never saw me before.' Remembering the Tory spy's handsome attire, especially the rich lace ruffles at his wrists, the lady pointed to his hand-cuffs and quietly remarked, 'Oh, yes I have, but you wore different ruffles at your wrists.'

"The spy was captured on Long Island, from which place he was taken to Fishkill Landing, and from thence to Goshen Jail, by Sheriff Isaac Nicoll, escorted by some of Captain Woodhull's Light Horse Troop.

"Mrs. Woodhull's testimony, it seems, convicted the British spy, and it is rather odd to reflect that he was hung, not for the murder of Major Strong, but for the robbery of Captain Woodhull's house and other robberies."

It is supposed that Captain Ebenezer Woodhull was a Presbyterian, at any rate we find the names of two of his sons, Thomas and Fletcher, among the contributors to the Presbyterian parsonage at Blooming Grove, and in those days most vigorous Whigs were staunch Presbyterians.

Captain Woodhull died October 4th, 1803, leaving a widow and nine children.

(See Genealogy, No. 30.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XIII.

John Woodhull, (D. D.), fifth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was born at Miller's Place, Long Island, January 26, 1744.

He was the second son of the Hon. John Woodhull and Elizabeth, daughter of Major William Henry Smith, of the "Tangier Smith" family.

John Woodhull prepared for college under his maternal uncle, the Rev. Caleb Smith, of Newark Mountain, now Orange, New Jersey, and in 1766, received the degree of A. B., from the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University.)

JOHN WOODHULL, D. D.

From the Thomas Sully portrait, painted in 1822, when Dr. Woodhull was seventy-eight years of age.

At this time Samuel Finley, D. D., was President of the College. From Princeton the young student went to Fagg's Manor, Chester County, Pa., where he pursued his theological studies under the Rev. John Blair, and was licensed to preach, by the Presbytery of New Castle, August, 1768.

Several urgent calls were received, from among which, John Woodhull chose that of the Presbyterian Church at Leacock, Lancaster County, Pa.

He was ordained and installed August 1, 1770. Upon that occasion, the Rev. Joseph Montgomery preached the sermon, the Rev. Robert Smith, D. D., presided, and the Rev. Alexander McDowell gave the charge to pastor and congregation.

Mr. Woodhull was the successor of the Rev. Robert Smith, D. D., an eminent theologian, and second Moderator of the General Assembly.

John Woodhull married, May 28, 1772, Sarah, only child of Captain George Spofford, of the Royal Navy.

Sarah Spofford Woodhull was a woman of fine mind and noble character; an ideal pastor's wife, full of zeal and helpfulness.

In the first year of his pastorate at Leacock, the Rev. John Woodhull purchased 138 acres of land from Mr. David Orner, upon which he built "a large, substantial, convenient, and for that day, an elegant house."

Since that time the house has been added to, but the part built by him is exactly as when the Rev. John Woodhull occupied it. This house is now in possession of Mrs. Steele, widow of Captain John Steele.

For ten years John Woodhull preached at Leacock, the beloved pastor of a loyal and united congregation. He was "a strenuous Whig," and with a number of other patriotic men, signed "a remarkable petition to the Pennsylvania Assembly, December 31, 1777, praying that all of the troops of the State be ordered out."

In the early part of the Revolutionary War, inspired by the patriotic fervor of their pastor, all the able-bodied men of the congregation went into the field, accompanied by the Rev. John Woodhull, as Chaplain.

He was Chaplain of the 7th Battalion 1777 Lancaster Militia, Colonel John Boyd.

Owing to a typographical error in the printed records, his name appears as John Woodwell, but in the original archives, according to the late William H. Egle, M. D., State Librarian at Harrisburg, the name was John Woodhull. (See letter at close of sketch.)

He was in the Germantown Campaign, and also in the Jerseys. On the occasion of the Battle of Monmouth, when a cannoneer fell near where he stood, John Woodhull assisted in serving the cannon. The authority for this statement was the late Colonel William C. Alexander, whose father, the Rev. Archibald Alexander, D. D., of Princeton, was a personal friend of John Woodhull's.

A number of interesting letters from camp are in the possession of Thenford Woodhull, of Brooklyn, New York, while his sword and sword-belt are in the possession of another great-grandson, John Tennent Woodhull, of Camden, New Jersey.

(For "Letters from Camp," see Genealogical Appendix, Note X.)

The funeral sermon of the unfortunate Captain John Huddy, who had been ruthlessly murdered by the British, was preached by Chaplain John Woodhull to a large concourse of people, some accounts say from the hotel piazza in the town of Freehold, New Jersey.

Later, he also preached the funeral sermon of the Hon. Nathaniel Scudder, M. D., Colonel First Monmouth Regiment, who met his death in an engagement near Shrewsbury. The text chosen for the sad occasion was from the words, "And all Judea and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah."

Colonel Scudder was buried with the honors of war, in the Old Tennent Churchyard. It was said of this man "few have fallen in this country that were so useful or so generally mourned in his death."

In 1779, much to the regret of his Leacock congregation, Rev. John Woodhull accepted a call to the Presbyterian Church, near Freehold, New Jersey, for many years known as the "Old Tennent Church."

He succeeded the celebrated William Tennent, who had preached for forty years in that church. Dr. Woodhull's pastorate was from 1779 to 1824, a period of forty-four years.

In 1778, John Woodhull received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Yale College, which, says one, "Was a distinction rarely conferred at that day, and more rarely perhaps by Yale than by any other College in the country."

For many years, in connection with his duties as pastor and preacher, Dr. Woodhull conducted a very successful grammar school. He also prepared young men for the ministry, many of whom became useful and beloved pastors.

This work he carried on until the establishment of Princeton Theological Seminary, of which he was a director, and most of the time Vice-President of the Board; until his death at an advanced age, he took the deepest interest in the welfare of the Seminary.

Among the young men who prepared for the ministry under Dr. Woodhull were the following: Robert Barkley, for years pastor of the Bound Brook Church; Holloway Whitefield Hunt and his brother Gardner, both of Sussex; Joseph Rue, of Pennington; Joseph Campbell, D. D., of Huntington; Cyrus Gildersleeve, who preached at Wilkesbarre; Peter Fish, of Long Island; Matthew La Rue Perrine, D. D., pastor at Madison, and later of Spring Street Church, New York; also one of the professors of the Auburn Theological Seminary. George Spofford Woodhull, of Cranbury; Selah Strong Woodhull, D. D., pastor of the Dutch Reformed Church of Brooklyn; Isaac V. Brown, D. D., pastor of the church at Lawrenceville, New Jersey, and founder of the successful preparatory school in that place. Rev. John McDowell, D. D., pastor of Elizabethtown church and of the Central and Spring Garden Church, of Philadelphia; Jacob T. Field and Jacob Kirkpatrick, D. D., Joseph Shafer, D. D., and the Rev. George Spofford Bergen, D. D.

John Woodhull, D. D., was one of the earliest members of the Cliosophic Society of the College of New Jersey. The Well-Meaning Society disbanded in the year 1769, and re-organized as The Cliosophic, June, 1770, the members of the former always having been recognized as belonging to the latter society.

He was a Trustee of the College of New Jersey for forty-four years, and upon one occasion, during the short absence of Dr. John Witherspoon, was Acting President.

Amidst his varied duties as preacher, pastor, classical teacher and theological instructor, Dr. Woodhull kept up a deep and lively interest in affairs of State and Union.

As a preacher he is said to have been exceedingly popular, so much so that "some pulpits in the vicinity of Freehold continued vacant for years, the congregations being satisfied with quarterly or half yearly visits from him."

Rev. John Woodhull, D. D., was Moderator of the last Synod of New York and Philadelphia, May, 1788, and the third Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

The following interesting bit of reminiscence is from an Historical Sermon by the Rev. P. J. Timlow, D. D.:

"In the winter of 1818-19, while I was yet a student at Princeton, though licensed to preach, I went at the suggestion of Dr. Miller to Freehold, New Jersey, to pass a Sabbath with Dr. Woodhull. It was my first acquaintance with him, and a letter from Dr. Miller was my introduction.

"I reached the hospitable, but rather humble dwelling (the historic 'Old Tennent Parsonage') on Saturday evening. He and his wife gave me a cordial welcome and I soon found that I was to be amply repaid for my journey.

"The house, which he occupied, stood, I think, on an open field; and he quickly told me that it was on or near the spot on which was fought the famous Battle of Monmouth.

"It was the house in which William Tennent had lived before him, and where Whitefield had often been a guest; and I remember his saying that when something of which he was speaking occurred, 'Whitefield sat there, and Tennent sat there.'

"His reminiscences of the olden time, and especially of the events of the Revolutionary War, seemed inexhaustible; and what rendered them the more interesting was, that he scarcely spoke of anything of which he was not himself a sharer or a witness."

Dr. Woodhull has been described as "a man of fine appearance, about six feet in height, erect to the last, very dignified and of an attractive benignity of countenance and manner."

He was a great favorite with the young people of his congregation, and beloved by all. Many anecdotes of Dr. Woodhull are still extant about Freehold.

The Spring previous to his death, Dr. Woodhull attended the Anniversary of the American Bible Society, and was one of the speakers of the occasion.

The Rev. Dr. McDowell who was present, said, "he attracted the marked attention of the audience. He spoke with an elevation of voice and distinctness and earnestness that surprised the audience, and it was the most popular speech made on that occasion."

Dr. Woodhull was nearly eighty-one years of age when he died, December 22, 1824. His illness was of short duration and he retained his vigor of body and mind to the end.

He was buried in Old Tennent Church-yard where a monument was erected to his memory by his devoted congregation.

The Rev. Isaac Brown a former theological student of Dr. Woodhull's preached the funeral sermon. Among other beautiful tributes to Dr. Woodhull's character was the following:

"In condescension, meekness, charity, and benevolence to the afflicted, his life was an open volume of instruction."

Dr. Woodhull had six children four of whom survived him. His widow, Mrs. Sarah Spofford Woodhull, died three years later; they had lived together over fifty years.

LIBRARIAN, WILLIAM H. EGLE, M. D.

HARRISBURG, PA., Feb. 28, 1891.

Schuyler C. Woodhull, Esq., 106 Market St., Camden, N. J.:

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your favor of February 26th.

Mr. Jordan is right in his surmises that John Woodwell chaplain 7th battalion, 1777, was John Woodhull. I yesterday compared the original and find it was a typographical error. He was not, however, at Valley Forge, in 1777 and 1778. He was in the Germantown campaign and I think was in the Jerseys in 1778, but was not in the cantonment at Valley Forge in the winter of 1777 and 1778, as stated.

Yours with respect,

(Signed) WILLIAM H. EGLE.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XIV.

ABRAHAM WOODHULL, (Hon.), fifth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was born October 7, 1750.

He was the youngest child of Richard Woodhull and Margaret Smith. He inherited the paternal estate at Setauket, Long Island, and at his death left to his grandson, Richard Lawrence Woodhull, an estate of more than three hundred acres.

He set his slaves free and gave to them homes of their own, years before they were legally freed. He was a great Presbyterian and "occupied a pew of authority" in the old church, doing much toward building the "new" or present Presbyterian Church at Setauket.

He was a man of integrity, punctual and very precise in his business relations, and filled numerous important positions, being for many years a Magistrate in Setauket, and also a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas from 1793 to 1799, and "First Judge of Suffolk County, Long Island" from 1799 to 1810.

His first wife was Mary, daughter of Obadiah Smith; his second, Lydia, daughter of James Terry.

He had two daughters and a son by his first wife.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XV.

Nathan Woodhull, (Rev.), fifth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of Captain Nathan Woodhull and Joanna Mills. He was born June 5, 1756.

He was graduated from Yale College in 1775, and received the degree of A. M. from the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University) in 1787. He married, March 16, 1778, Hannah, daughter of Stephen Jagger.

For several years he was a merchant and was also engaged in farming, but later took up the study of theology with the Rev. John Davenport.

He was ordained to preach the Gospel by the Presbytery of Long Island, in June, 1784, and was installed pastor at Huntington, Long Island, in 1785. In 1789 he accepted a call from the Presbyterian Church at Newtown, Long Island, where he remained a beloved and successful pastor until his death March 13, 1810.

He was a man "of winning manners, and affable disposition, exceedingly popular both as pastor and preacher, and admired for his vivacity and fine personal appearance as well as for the high order of his pulpit addresses."

It has been said of him that "he stood conspicuous among his brethren in the ministry."

He left a widow, one son and six daughters.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XVI.

Ebenezer Woodhull, fifth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the youngest child of Colonel Jesse Woodhull and Hester Du Bois, of Orange County, New York.

He was born January 23, 1772.

He settled at Herkimer, Herkimer County, New York, in the Mohawk Valley, about the year 1804, upon a tract of land purchased of Peter Gansvoort and Jeremiah Van Rensselaer.

Ebenezer Woodhull served with honor during the War of 1812. He married Sarah, daughter of Hezekiah Tallcott, first Judge of Herkimer County, New York.

They had seven children, three sons and four daughters.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XVII.

George Spofford Woodhull, (Rev.), sixth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of the Rev. John Woodhull, D. D., and Sarah Spofford. He was born at Leacock, Lancaster County, Pa., March 31, 1773.

He was graduated from the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University) in 1790, after which he studied law one year and medicine two years and then, it is said, through the influence of a sermon preached by his father, determined to enter the ministry.

He was licensed by the Presbytery of New Brunswick to preach the gospel, and was installed pastor of the church at Cranbury, New Jersey, June 6, 1798. In the following year he married Gertrude, the eldest daughter of Colonel John Neilson, of New Brunswick, New Jersey.

For twenty-two years he preached at Cranbury, and it was said that "his ministry was faithful, noiseless and dignified." In 1820 he accepted a call to the Presbyterian Church at Princeton, New Jersey, where he was installed July 5, of the same year.

His venerable father, the Rev. John Woodhull, D. D., of Freehold, New Jersey, presided. The Rev. Isaac V. Brown, D. D., of Lawrenceville, New Jersey, preached the installation sermon. The charge to the pastor was given by the Rev. Archibald Alexander, D. D., the charge to the people being given by the Rev. Samuel Miller, D. D.

The Princeton pastorate was of twelve years' duration and "was marked by a greater increase in the church membership than that of any of his predecessors."

He was a man well known for his public spirit and was possessed of a beautiful Christian character. His father once said of him, "I have no recollection of ever having occasion to reprove him in his life."

In April, 1811, he was one of the little band who gathered in Princeton and founded the New Jersey Bible Society, in which society he kept up a deep interest throughout his life.

He it was who first suggested Bible Class instruction in churches, in 1815, having successfully tried it in his own. This wise suggestion was recommended to all the churches by the General Assembly and was finally introduced throughout the entire Presbyterian organization.

He practiced "entire abstinence" long before the Temperance Reform commenced, and, following his earnest efforts to abolish the use of ardent spirits, in the year 1818, the General Assembly made solemn recommendations to all church officers upon the subject. This was eight years before the formation of the American Temperance Society. A temperance pledge bearing date as far back as 1815, and signed by several members of his congregation was found among his papers after his death.

He was a Trustee of the College of New Jersey for many years and was one of the Incorporators of the Board of Trustees of Princeton Theological Seminary, and was a member of that Board from 1822, the date of the incorporation until his death.

In 1832 he resigned his Princeton pastorate and accepted a call to Middletown Point (now Matawan), New Jersey.

He died there December 25, 1834, after a brief pastorate of about two years.

In 1835, the Rev. Samuel Miller, D. D., preached a sermon in memoriam, at the request of his former Princeton congregation. He paid a beautiful and fitting tribute to him in the following words:

"His history is his portrait. It has been my lot within the last forty years of my life to be acquainted with many hundred ministers of the Gospel of various denominations, and with not a few of them to be on what might be called intimate terms, and although I have known a number of more splendid, of more impressive eloquence than your late pastor, yet in the great moral qualities which go to form the good man, the exemplary Christian, the diligent and untiring pastor, the benevolent neighbor and citizen, and the dignified, polished, perfect gentleman, I have seldom known his equal, and I think never on the whole his superior."

His was an eminently blameless life, a remarkably successful ministry. One has said of him that he was "calm and holy to the last."

The Rev. George Spofford Woodhull left a widow and three sons.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XVIII.

Richard Miller Woodhull, sixth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the only son of the Hon. Richard Woodhull V., and Sarah Miller.

He was born in the year 1774. Was a New York merchant, a man of intelligence and full of ambition.

He purchased thirteen acres of land in the region of Brooklyn, and laid it out in city lots, naming the place Williamsburgh, after his friend, Colonel Williams, U. S. Engineer, who surveyed the land.

Richard Miller Woodhull also established a ferry, a need which he fully appreciated.

Later, in the year 1812, Thomas Morrell of Newtown, Long Island, also obtained a grant for a ferry, and succeeded with his venture. Woodhull having financially embarrassed himself with his too large undertaking, at a period when the district was neither prepared nor populated sufficiently to buy up the laid out Borough lots in the new town of Williamsburgh, the property passed out of his hands, first into the possession of his father-in-law, James Horner Maxwell, of New York City, and finally out of the family altogether. The original name of Williamsburgh was however preserved.

Says John M. Stiles, in his "History of The Town of Williamsburgh," (included in the "History of Brooklyn,") "Woodhull's and Maxwell's experience was that which is common to men who think in advance of their time, but they will ever be mentioned with respect as the fathers of the town."

Richard Miller Woodhull married, March 24, 1810, Marian Margaret, daughter of James Horner Maxwell and Catherine Van Zandt (daughter of Jacobus Van Zandt, the Revolutionary patriot.)

He died November 3, 1815, in New York City and was buried in the Maxwell family vault in Old Trinity Church-yard.

He left a widow and two children.

(See Genealogy, No. 120.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XIX.

Selah Strong Woodhull, (Rev.), sixth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the only son of James Woodhull and Keturah Strong. He was born August 4, 1786, in the city of New York, where his father was a merchant.

At the age of twelve he entered the Freshman Class of Columbia College, New York, but later, in 1798 entered Yale.

One of his classmates wrote of him:

"He was the youngest in the class, and hardly advanced enough to appreciate fully the value of thorough scholarship; still he appeared well in the recitation room, showed that he acquired his lessons easily, and possessed a mind capable of great acquisition.

"Had he been sixteen or eighteen when he entered College, he would probably have ranked among the very best scholars of the class."

He graduated in 1802 at the age of sixteen. Soon after, he began the study of Law in New York City, but during a visit to his uncle, the Rev. John Woodhull, D. D., of Freehold, New Jersey, his religious impressions became so deep that he felt impelled to relinquish the idea of becoming a lawyer and look toward the ministry as his life profession.

JOHN TENNENT WOODHULL, M. D.

Biographical Sketch XX.

He studied theology under Dr. Woodhull and such was the remarkable precocity of his mind, that he was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of New Brunswick, New Jersey, in his nineteenth year (1805).

He settled at Bound Brook, New Jersey, for a year. In 1806 he was pastor of the First Reformed Dutch Church, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and the same year had conferred upon him the degree of D. D., from Yale College.

He was for many years the able and indefatigable Secretary of the American Bible Society.

In 1825, he resigned his Brooklyn pastorate, and also the Secretaryship of the Bible Society, to accept the Professorship of Ecclesiastical History, Church Government, and Pastoral Theology, in the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Dutch Church at New Brunswick.

He was also Professor of Metaphysical Philosophy, and Philosophy of the Human Mind, in Rutgers College, New Brunswick.

He married, November 10, 1807, Cornelia Van Cleve, of Princeton, New Jersey.

His useful and promising career was ended by his death, February 27, 1826.

The funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Brownlee, a portion of which was published in the Magazine of the Reformed Dutch Church for December, 1826.

It is remarkable that fifty-two sermons that had never been preached were found among his papers after his death.

He left a widow and five daughters.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XX.

John Tennent Woodhull, (M. D.), sixth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the second son of the Rev. John Woodhull, D. D., and Sarah Spofford.

He was born August 24, 1786, in the Old Tennent Parsonage, near Freehold, New Jersey. He received a classical education from his father, after which he graduated in 1809, from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and later, in 1812, received the degree of A. M. from the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University).

He married, January 22, 1812, Anne, daughter of William Wikoff and Hannah Scudder.

For half a century he enjoyed a high reputation in Monmouth County, New Jersey, as a physician of skill and ability.

His life was notably pure, and he was generous almost to a fault; he was a man who detested shams, being a hearty sympathizer in all that elevates and improves the condition of humanity, which is attested by the fact that he freed his faithful slaves some years before slavery became illegal, and did all in his power to educate and uplift them.

From 1821 to 1827 he was a member of the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey. He was also a State Senator in 1825, and a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas.

In politics he was a staunch Whig, and to the end of his life took the liveliest interest in the political affairs of the day.

In appearance he was above six feet in height, wore his iron gray hair in a queue, and was distinguished for his dignified and courtly bearing. He possessed a vigorous intellect which he retained to the last.

The Bible and Shakespeare were his favorite books, and no man knew them more intimately.

For many years Dr. Woodhull was an elder in the historic Old Tennent Church, where his father preached for nearly half a century.

He died on Thanksgiving Day, 1869, at the home of his eldest son, the Hon. George Spofford Woodhull, of Camden, New Jersey.

Two daughters and six sons survived him.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXI.

James Haines Woodhull, seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of William Woodhull and Ruth Haines. He was born at Roxbury (now Chester), Morris County, New Jersey, March 28, 1791.

As far as can be learned, his early life was spent in and about his birthplace.

He married, April 4, 1811, Harriet, daughter of John and Mary Eastburn, of New York City.

It is evident from such letters as exist that for several years he resided in the City of New York, and that on or about the date of his second marriage to Eliza D. Campbell, which occurred February 12, 1824, he removed to Newark, New Jersey.

Very little is known of his business career until about the years 1829-30, when having been in the grocery business in Newark, New Jersey, he failed "because he trusted everybody."

His second wife died July 16, 1829, leaving three children.

The two journals which he wrote in the years 1829 and 1830 contain some interesting facts which show that he was a most saintly and religious man.

The journals referred to were written mostly on Sundays, and were made up almost exclusively of comments on sermons he had heard, or reflections on his own religious experiences. Most of these seem too sacred, and personal, for publication, but one or two references may be of interest as showing the character of the man.

Under date of May 8, 1830, he writes:

"Oh my soul, to which of those worlds art thou hastening? Thou hast professed to be on thy journey to the Heavenly Kingdom. Art thou in the right way? What are thy evidences? Examine carefully and faithfully thy letter of instructions. A mistake here may be fatal to thy everlasting happiness."

Under date of June 14, 1830, there appears this entry:

"This day in company with my Christian Brother Dougherty have taken a delightful ride to Paterson, which however brings to my mind some most painful circumstances. I have been but once to that place, before today, and that was in the year 1822, during the prevalence of the yellow fever in the City of New York, where I then lived. I and my dear wife were induced, almost against our wills and against the dictates of our consciences, to go on the Sabbath Day. My heart sinks of that sin, and the judgments which immediately followed, for in about six weeks, three out of the four of us who were heads of families, were numbered with the dead, and I was raised, as it were, from the grave. I was taken with the yellow fever in about two weeks after that visit. Oh Lord, how great is thy goodness towards me in sparing my life, when thou mightest so justly have cut me off."

Under date of July 3, 1830, he gives expression to sentiments which seem particularly interesting as forecasting the Emancipation Proclamation of thirty years later.

He says, in speaking of a certain Colonization Society for the negroes:

"How surprising, that we who so highly prize liberty, should continue to oppress our brother man and hold him in bondage a thousandfold worse than that for which we fought and bled. Oh, Lord, awaken this people to see and do their duty in this matter."

On August 1, 1831, he married his third wife, Adeline Baldwin, daughter of Ananias and Elizabeth Baldwin.

Shortly after his third marriage, he became one of the organizers of the American Fire Insurance Company of Newark, New Jersey, and for the remainder of his life was connected with that Company as its Secretary.

He was one of the organizers and an Elder in the First Congregational Church, of the City of Newark, and throughout his life was a man of broad mind, and beloved by all who knew him.

He died at Newark, New Jersey, January 31, 1873, leaving a widow, one son and a daughter.

(See Genealogy, No. 278.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXII.

Caleb Smith Woodhull, (Hon.), sixth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the fourth son of Merritt Smith Woodhull and Mary Davis. He was born February 26, 1792, at Miller's Place, Long Island.

He pursued his classical course preparatory to College, under the Rev. Herman Daggett, of Brookhaven, Long Island. He entered Yale College in 1808, at the age of fifteen, then under the Presidency of Dr. Dwight, and graduated with the honors of his class in 1811.

He taught for a few months after his graduation and then commenced the study of law, with George W. Strong, a New York lawyer of high repute.

He was a private in the War of 1812, a member of the Militia in New York City, which were the guardians of the city, but saw no active service. He continued in the Militia for many years, holding several commissions during that period. Owing to his disapproval of certain methods, then in vogue, he resigned his commission in 1830, urging, at the same time, the necessity for, and strongly recommending, a system that was afterwards adopted.

In 1817 he was admitted to the New York Bar, as Counsellor-at-Law. He was a warm advocate of the Whig party, and at the Charter election in the Spring of 1836, was chosen to represent the second ward in the Common Council, and was continued by his constituents a member of that body for eight successive years.

In 1843 he was President of the Board of Aldermen and of the Common Council, and was elected Mayor of the City of New York in the Spring of 1849, which office he held until January, 1851, when he retired from political life.

During the term of his Mayoralty, this country was visited by Jenny Lind, the celebrated Swedish singer, and he was her only adviser as to her many charities bestowed upon the poor and needy of the great city.

During this time the famous singer spent an evening at the hospitable home of Mr. Woodhull, the memory of which is treasured by his children to this day. General Louis Kossuth was another distinguished visitor to this home.

The "Astor Place Riot" was an event in his political career which called down both censure and high praise, censure because he was thought to have been too humane in not sooner giving the order to fire upon the surging mob of maddened men. He however received many congratulatory letters for the course pursued upon that memorable night, among which was one from Queen Victoria, thanking him for protecting one of her British subjects.

Caleb Smith Woodhull was for many years Chairman of the Law Committee, during which period many measures of importance were recommended or defeated by his strong influence.

In 1844 he was chosen by the political friends of Henry Clay, one of the Presidential Electors for New York State, and with the exception of the Hon. John A. Collier, received the highest number of votes.

"He was a man of broad political outlook, and possessed not only the unshaken confidence and esteem of his friends, but the high regard of his political opponents as well.

"His sound judgment, integrity and talents made him a man of great usefulness in his generation."

Although never very robust, he was remarkably active throughout his life. He was tall, slender, and very erect.

Until his marriage he was a Presbyterian, after which he attended the Collegiate Church, in Fulton St., New York.

In 1818, he married Lavinia Nostrander, who died within a few months. In 1830, he married Harriet, daughter of Abraham Fardon, of New York City.

He died at his birth-place, Miller's Place, Long Island, July 16, 1866, leaving a son and daughter.

(See Genealogy, No. 144.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXIII.

Gilbert Smith Woodhull, (M. D.), sixth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the youngest child of the Rev. John Woodhull, D. D., and Sarah Spofford. He was born near Freehold, New Jersey, January 11, 1794.

His literary studies were pursued under his father, who was a successful teacher, as well as preacher. He was graduated from the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University) in 1823. His medical preceptors were Dr. John Tennent Woodhull (his brother), and Dr. Hosack, of New York.

He was graduated from Jefferson Medical College, after which he acquired a very extensive practice in the townships of Freehold, Manalapan, and Upper Freehold.

He was a man of fine personal appearance, prepossessing address, and manner unusually pleasing and magnetic, combining dignity with a genuine bonhomie.

He was almost a Centaur in his out-of-door life, always in the saddle, sitting his horse with inimitable ease and grace; riding at a slashing gait; shortening distances by crossing fields and fences, of great endurance, a stranger to fatigue.

The close of a morning's ride would frequently find him forty miles away from his starting point.

Inheriting considerable wealth from his father, he practiced rather from love of his profession than the desire of pecuniary gain.

Eminently a pious man, he was chosen a Ruling Elder in the Presbyterian Church at Perrineville, New Jersey, of which his nephew was pastor.

He married, November 25, 1817, Charlotte, daughter of William Wikoff, of Monmouth County, New Jersey.

He was admitted a member of the Monmouth District Medical Society in the year 1818. In 1822-3 he was elected President of the County and in 1825 of the State Medical Society.

This brilliant man died in his thirty-seventh year, leaving a widow, three daughters and a son.

(See Genealogy, No. 139.)

He was interred in the burial ground attached to the Presbyterian Church at Perrineville, where a substantial monument was erected to his memory, upon which is inscribed this appropriate quotation:

"I have fought a good fight,
I have finished my course.
I have kept the faith.

"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them that love his appearing."

(See "History of the Monmouth District Medical Society.")

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXIV.

Samuel Woodhull, sixth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the third son of Abraham Cooper Woodhull and Eunice Sturges. He was born at Fairfield, Connecticut, January 5, 1800.

Afflicted with deafness at nine years of age, an elder sister took it upon herself to give him an education.

In later years books were to him a source of deep pleasure. History and poetry seem to have been his greatest solace. He also wielded a facile pen, and some of his published writings show a deeply thoughtful, tender nature.

In 1830, in a bit of blank verse occur these lines, uttering the longing for free libraries:

"See'st thou our youth? and dost thou hear them plead?
They long for knowledge, but no books to read
Then found a Library, rich, choice and free.
Sure all will join in such Philanthropy,
And thus these youth much Knowledge will obtain
And wiser be when future years they gain."

Owing to his deafness, by which he was greatly hampered in the choice of a business career, he took up the tailoring trade.

In 1848, he took the long and toilsome journey to the California gold-diggings, where he remained several years absent from his family, but returned at length, little the richer except in experience and travel.

He was a most exemplary man, of kindly disposition, a consistent Christian and a Presbyterian, esteemed and loved by all who knew him.

In 1823, he married Mary Ann Bull, of New Haven, Connecticut. They had six children. He died April 14, 1869.

(See Genealogy, No. 177.)

The following lines from the pen of Samuel Woodhull will be of special interest to his descendants. It was written at North Fork American River, California, May 9, 1851:

TO MY WIFE.

'Tis true my love, I said goodbye
What else could I have said?
I knew full well your heart's reply,
What in your face I read.

What anguish gushes from the heart
The quivering lip will tell,
When "two fond souls" are call'd to part
And far from each to dwell.

O, keen and bitter words of woe,
Goodbye—Farewell—Adieu
Which could I choose to send a throe,
In thy kind heart so true?

But now 'tis o'er we parted then
Our hearts were wrung with pain
But "Hope and Courage makes the man,"
And we may meet again.

My heart responds most warm with thine
To pray and hope each day
No heart can feel more deep than mine
If near—or far away.

Yes, feel for you, my Joy my Pride,
(Our little ones likewise,)
No earthly bliss—or gold beside,
So precious in my eyes.

Hope on—Hope on—the day may come
When we again shall meet
When you and home—will be my home
In love and bliss complete.

'Till then "Goodbye," you'll think of me
Most kindly and most true;
And in return I'll think of thee
Dear wife and babes—Adieu.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXV.

Richard Woodhull, (Rev.), sixth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was born in Fairfield, Connecticut, January 15, 1802.

He was the youngest child of Abraham Cooper Woodhull and Eunice Sturges. His father, a sea captain, lost his life in an accident in Boston Harbor when his son was but seventeen months old; so from this early age he came under the entire charge of his mother, who in this sad loss, was also left in straitened circumstances; she was however a woman of strong character, sincere piety, and of great industry and energy; this early influence formed her son's character for after years.

During these early years, her judicious instruction, and the reading of choice books in the evenings, gave him his love of books, and under the pastoral care and teachings of Dr. Humphrey, afterwards President of Amherst College, his mind and heart were so deeply impressed, that the influence of his ministry was never effaced.

At the age of eighteen he was brought to dedicate himself to God, and he gave at once his life of active usefulness in the Cause of Christ, and soon had a desire to become a minister.

Being without the necessary means for his studies, he applied to the Education Society of Maine for assistance, and this application being accepted he was enabled to finish his preparatory and Collegiate course. It is worthy of mention here, that the money paid to him from the Education Society was paid back to that Society, both principal and interest.

Richard Woodhull entered Bowdoin College in 1823, and assisted himself pecuniarily by teaching in the town during most of his senior year, and graduated in 1827 with high rank in his class.

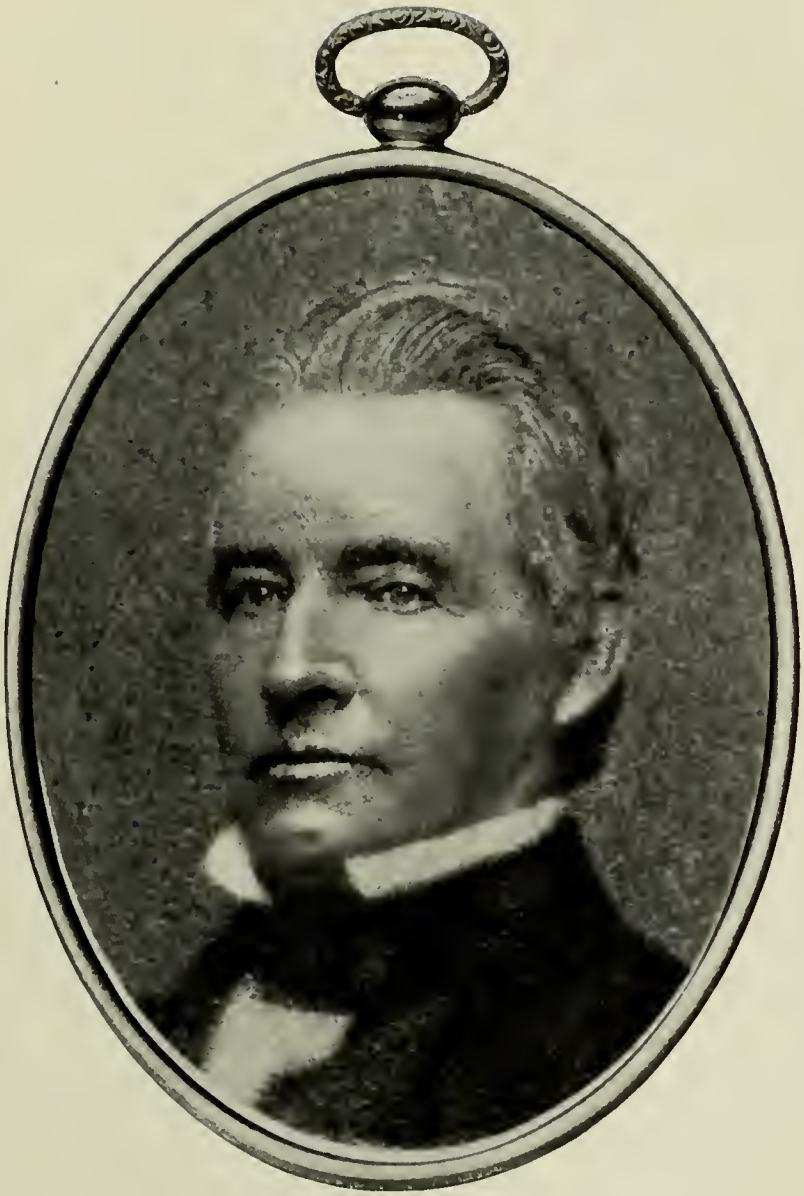
After leaving College he entered Princeton Theological Seminary, but at the close of the first year, through the advice of President Allen, of Bowdoin, he took charge of the Classical Department of Bangor Theological Seminary, which position he filled with great acceptance until he entered the ministry.

On August 13, 1829, he was married to Sarah, daughter of William Forbes, Esq., of Brookfield, Massachusetts, and Bangor, Maine.

Their life together, of forty-four years, was one of mutual sympathy and happiness, ten children being born to them.

In 1830 Mr. Woodhull accepted a call to the Congregational Church in Thomaston, Maine, and was ordained their pastor July 7, President Allen, of Bowdoin College, preaching the sermon.

This pastorate was held with fidelity for twenty-four years and eight months, and he loved his people. This period was filled with study and labor, with sympathy and comfort to those under affliction, with instruction in every duty in life and in education; he was a great help to this town of sea-faring men, having taught some hundred, or more, ship masters their navigation.



RICHARD WOODHULL, Rev.

Biographical Sketch XXV.

Besides the merely religious, many an interest, private and public, felt his influence. But the field was hard, there had been in it elements impossible to harmonize, and the meagre salary was often short in payment, making it difficult to meet the common necessities of life; this Mr. Woodhull supplemented by teaching a young ladies' select school, and also in his writings for publication.

During his ministry there were three considerable revivals, in the years 1834-37 and '42, when forty-nine persons were received into the church by profession.

At the close of the Rev. Richard Woodhull's ministry at Thomaston, he accepted the Agency of the American Bible Society, which he held with great fidelity until 1862, when he was chosen Treasurer and General Agent of the Bangor Theological Seminary; and this office he held until his death.

During his period of office the funds of the Seminary increased by $163,000. As one of the Board of Trustees remarked, "Undoubtedly due to the marked financial ability, sound judgment, untiring zeal, and strict integrity of Mr. Woodhull."

Rev. Richard Woodhull was one of the oldest members of the Board of Overseers of Bowdoin College, a member, and for some years President of the Board of Trustees of the State Hospital for the Insane at Augusta, and a Trustee of the Maine Charitable Society, besides holding various minor positions of trust and usefulness.

Next to his integrity, his remarkably sound judgment made his services exceedingly valuable in all the important trusts which he filled.

His wisdom in counsel was marked by all, his judgment was wonderfully correct on all committees and boards of trust, and especially in cases of church difficulties and questions of policy and expediency.

His opinion, when asked and given, always carried great weight with it. He was a thorough student in Latin and Mathematics and possessed much musical talent.

He had a logical mind and could sustain his position in an argument, and his generous sympathies and warmth of heart made him a most useful Christian minister and a model parishioner in his later years.

It has been said of him as a minister of Christ, "that voice of his and conscientious face, as he stood and delivered his Master's message, an audience, once hearing and seeing, would not soon forget."

Rev. Richard Woodhull died at Bangor, Maine, November 12, 1873, aged 71 years and 10 months. During his long year of suffering all the beautiful traits of his lifelong piety shone forth most brilliantly, his obedience, his submission, his faith in God, his singular conscientiousness, his love of prayer—these were never clouded, and made the pathway of this noble and true man "shine brighter and brighter unto the perfect day."

He was survived by his wife and six children.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXVI.

John Neilson Woodhull, (M. D.), seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the second son of the Rev. George Spofford Woodhull and Gertrude Neilson. He was born July 25, 1807.

He entered the sophomore class at the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University), in 1825, and graduated in 1828.

Studied medicine with Samuel L. Howell, M. D., of Princeton, and graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1832.

He commenced practice at Middletown Point, now Matawan, New Jersey, the same year, and in the latter part of 1835 opened an office at Trenton, New Jersey, but removed in a short time to Princeton, and there in the Spring of 1836, his brother, Alfred A. Woodhull, M. D., joined him in partnership.

Dr. Alfred A. Woodhull died in the following year, but Dr. John N. Woodhull continued the practice of his medical profession for more than thirty years in Princeton.

In his early manhood, Dr. Woodhull was very delicate, but having overcome that physical weakness, he carried on for many years a very extensive and successful country practice, which in later life was limited to office consultation.

He had a marked taste for agriculture as well as for medicine and in the early forties purchased a large farm on Stony Brook, beyond Princeton, the cultivation of one-half of which he superintended for more than fifteen years.

While the practice of Dr. Woodhull was both a large and extensive one, yet his retentive memory seemed to carry all the details of a case.

In the sick-room he was inspiring, while his insight into the actual condition of his patients was singularly accurate.

He had a very large acquaintance, and never failed in cordial recognition, but he had very few intimates. His manner was both genial and reserved.

He never held office of any kind, nor did he ever engage in organized work whether professional, social or civic. He was liberal to approved charities, and to the deserving poor, but was unostentatious in his benevolence.

Like all physicians, he performed a large amount of gratuitous work.

Dr. Woodhull never married, his mother and one of her sisters constituted his family. He also took into his home, at different times sons of his two deceased brothers, and gave them opportunities for education they could not otherwise have enjoyed.

He removed to his residence in Princeton in 1858, and died there January 12, 1867.

His estate was very considerable for one acquired by the practice of medicine, and nearly all of it, not included in his farm, he bequeathed to the College for the purpose of founding a Professorship.

He was by far the most successful practitioner in the extensive region covered by his rounds, his very presence creating a trust that was doubtless a large factor in that success.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXVII.

Alfred Alexander Woodhull, (M. D.), seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the youngest son of the Rev. George Spofford Woodhull and Gertrude Neilson. He was born at Cranbury, New Jersey, March 25, 1810.

He was graduated from the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University,) A. B., 1828, and received his degree of A. M. in 1831. He was graduated in medicine (M. D.), from the University of Pennsylvania in 1831.

After a year of hospital practice in Philadelphia, he began the practice of medicine at Marietta, Lancaster Co., Penna., in 1832.

Dr. Woodhull removed to Princeton in 1835, and died there October 5, 1836. Up to the time of his death he was actively engaged in his medical practice.

By his contemporaries Dr. A. A. Woodhull was described as a young man of attractive figure, handsome features, and most winning manners. He was public-spirited, taking an active part in town affairs (but not holding office) and especially interested in the promotion of temperance reform.

He was elected a trustee of the Princeton Presbyterian Church in 1835. His professional reputation was that of an intelligent, popular, and successful physician.

He had a happy faculty of writing verse, some of which has marked poetical merit. Earlier editions of the Presbyterian hymn-book contained several of his hymns. During his last illness, when assured that recovery was hopeless, he dictated the following beautiful lines:

Traveler dost thou hear the tidings
Borne unto thy weary ear,
Soft as angel's gentlest whisper
Breathing from the upper sphere,
Sweetly telling
Thy redemption now is near.

In the desert's gloomy terrors,
'Mid the tempest's booming roar,
Hark! the still small voice of mercy
Breaking from yon fearful shore,
Sweetly telling
All thy toil will soon be o'er.

Mourner, when the tear of sorrow
Wells from up thy stricken breast,
Raise thy streaming eyes to mansions
Where the weary are at rest,
Sweetly telling
Here thou'lt be a welcome guest.

Mortal, when death's viewless arrow
Quivers in thy fluttering heart,
Lift thy lapsing thoughts to Jesus,
Who disarms the fatal dart,
Sweetly telling
I to thee my peace impart.

These verses were originally published in the New York Observer, (probably in the autumn of 1836.) The poem and a sketch of the author, may be found in "The Poets of the Church," by Edwin F. Hatfield, D. D.

Anna Maria Salomons, who was married to Dr. Woodhull, was born at Princeton, March 30, 1811. They were married, February 26, 1833.

Her father was Dr. Dirck G. Salomons, of St. Eustacia, of the Dutch West Indies, who had been a student at Princeton, but did not graduate there, although he received the honorary degree of A. M., perhaps with his class, from that institution in 1812.

He was graduated in Medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons (now Columbia), New York, in 1812, and returned with his family to his father's estate in the West Indies, where he died a few years afterward at an early age.

Dr. Salomons' widow then returned with her two daughters to her father, President Smith, of Princeton.

Mrs. Woodhull's mother was Susan, daughter of the Rev. Samuel Stanhope Smith, D. D., and Ann, daughter of the Rev. John Witherspoon, D. D., both Presidents of Princeton College.

Through the Witherspoon line she was a descendant of John Knox the Scottish Reformer, or as the noblemen and freemen of Kyle and Cunningham called him, "the first Planter and Chief Waterer of God's Church."

John Witherspoon and Elizabeth Montgomerie married September 20, 1748; she was the daughter of Robert Montgomerie, of Craighouse Ayrshire, Scotland.

Their daughter Ann Witherspoon, born July 23, 1749, married Samuel Stanhope Smith, in June, 1775.

Their daughter Susan, born June 23, 1785, married Dirck G. Salomons (about the year 1810), records lost. She died at Princeton, in June, 1849.

Their daughter Anna Maria, born March 30, 1811, married Dr. A. A. Woodhull, of Marietta, Pa., February 26, 1833. After two years' residence at Marietta, they returned in 1835 to Princeton, where she was left a widow October 5, 1836. Her only child, a posthumous son, was born April 13, 1837.

(See Genealogy, No. 309.)

She was married in Philadelphia, November 18, 1850, to William R. McCay, of Lewistown, Pa., at which place she died, August 20, 1862.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXVIII.

Maxwell Woodhull, (Captain United States Navy), seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the only son of Richard Miller Woodhull and Catherine Van Zandt.

He was born April 2, 1813. On June 4, 1832, he entered the Navy by appointment from President Andrew Jackson, and served with credit during his entire life.

He served in the Mediterranean, on the Coast of Africa, on the Brazil Station, and in the Gulf of Mexico.

During the Paraguay expedition he was executive officer of the Flag-ship "Sabine," and afterward commanded the Brig "Bainbridge."

Being attached to the Coast Survey, he surveyed New York Harbor and the obstructions of Hell Gate, reported plans for their removal, and received the thanks of the Chamber of Commerce of New York. He was also engaged on surveys on the New England Coast.

At the opening of the Civil War he was assigned to special duty under the Navy Department, and promoted to the rank of Commander, July 1, 1861.

He organized the supply service for the blockading fleet, commanded the "Connecticut," was afterward transferred to the Gunboat "Cimerone," and led a division of the James River Flotilla during General George B. McClellan's Peninsular Campaign.

He married, December 13, 1842, Ellen Francis, daughter of Moses Poor, Esq., of Washington, D. C.

He died in Baltimore, Maryland, February 19, 1863, and was buried with military honors, the funeral being held in the City of Washington, February 21, 1863, after which the body was taken to New York City for interment in the Maxwell family vault in Old Trinity Church-yard, where his father and mother were also buried.

He was survived by a widow, two sons and a daughter.

(See Genealogy, No. 276.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXIX.

Calvin Woodhull, sixth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the second son of Ebenezer Woodhull and Sarah Tallcott, and grandson of Colonel Jesse Woodhull.

He was born at Herkimer, New York, April 4, 1813. In 1853 he removed to Schoharie County, New York. He married, September 12, 1844, Gertrude M., daughter of Waterman Watkins.

His early recollections of Herkimer County in his boyhood days are interesting.

He witnessed the grading of the first turnpike road from Albany to Utica; saw the first four-horse stage go through some months later; remembers the laying of the first strap iron railroad track through the Mohawk Valley, and saw the first train of cars go by.

He remembers watching the bateaux being "poled" up the Mohawk by two men. This was the first mode of transporting goods to the settlements in the valley. Each bateau was about 24 feet long and carried about two tons.

He saw the building of the Erie canal through his farm, and was a witness of the great celebration, in October, 1825, when the canal was open to traffic, and the Hudson was baptized with the waters of Lake Erie.

He has lived to see the four tracks of the New York Central Railroad revolutionize the valley, and the frontier moved to the Hawaiian Islands in the dim west of the Pacific ocean.

At this time, (1904) in his 91st year, he is enjoying good health, a sound body, and a clear mind.

(See Genealogy, No. 199.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXX.

George Spofford Woodhull, (Hon.), seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the second son of John Woodhull, M. D., and Ann Wikoff. He was born at the family homestead at Manalapan, four miles from Freehold, New Jersey, December 25, 1814.

In 1830 he entered Princeton College (now Princeton University), graduating with honor in 1833, after which he studied law with Richard S. Field, at Princeton, New Jersey, and was admitted to the bar in 1839.

In the year 1842 he opened a law office in Freehold, New Jersey, where he practiced for several years, and in April, 1847, he was married to Caroline Mandeville Vroom, youngest child of Guysbert Bogert Vroom and Catalina Delamater, of New York City, and niece of the late Governor Peter D. Vroom, of New Jersey.

In 1850 he removed to May's Landing, New Jersey, where he became the Prosecuting Attorney of Atlantic County, and later held the same office for Cape May County.

He was an ardent Republican, and during this period he became a candidate for the State Senate on the Republican ticket. Though the district was strongly Democratic, he made such a vigorous canvass, that he reduced his opponent's majority to a very small figure. After his defeat he continued his efforts on behalf of his party, and a few years later, Atlantic County took its place in the Republican column, where it has remained ever since.

Geo. Woodhull.

Biographical Sketch XXX.

In 1862 he removed to Camden, New Jersey, and in 1866 was appointed by Governor Marcus L. Ward, Justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey.

During the first administration of President U. S. Grant, Judge Woodhull was tendered the office of Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and although acceptance was strongly urged upon him by the Vice-President, Schuyler Colfax, he declined the office, deeming the salary inadequate, without private means, for the suitable maintenance of a large family, in the City of Washington.

In 1873 Governor Joel Parker re-nominated him for another term of seven years, to succeed himself, the nomination being confirmed immediately by the Senate.

During the years that he sat on the bench, he presided at several very important criminal trials, two of which might be classed among the causes célèbres of the State. In one of these he set aside the verdict of the jury, which was very rarely done in the criminal jurisprudence of New Jersey.

The late Rev. Kemper Bocock, of Philadelphia, a clergyman in the Episcopal Church, and assistant Editor of The Church Standard, was some years ago a newspaper reporter. He wrote thus of the Hon. George S. Woodhull in his judicial capacity:

> "'Tall men, suncrowned, who live above the fog,
> In public duty and in private thinking.'

"The above lines come into my mind as I try to recall the impressions received of Judge Woodhull by a young reporter who sat through the famous Hunter murder trial in Camden, N. J., nearly twenty-five years ago.

"It was one of the most sensational crimes and one of the longest murder trials I have known of. The Court House was crowded daily, and at times it was not easy to preserve order.

"The friends of the accused, the army of morbid seekers for the gratification of maudlin sympathy with criminals, and the host of political rounders who gather about public office buildings made up a most motley assemblage.

"Richard S. Jenkins, Prosecutor of the Pleas, and his nephew, Wilson H. Jenkins, were pitted against Ex-Secretary of the Navy George M. Robeson, Aaron Thompson, and James Matlack Scovel.

"It was a battle of legal giants, determined to leave no stone unturned to gain a victory. Their debates became exciting at times. Mr. Robeson played on all the strings of the harp of pathos, while Richard Jenkins and James Scovel battled fiercely, as if fighting for their own lives. On one occasion the prisoner at the bar, moved to a frenzy of rage, sprang from his seat, shook his fist at the witness, and gave him the lie.

"In and over all this, Judge Woodhull presided like one who lived in a serene clime. There was no air of conscious superiority or boredom; but his calm, gentle voice, issuing a quiet order to the tipstaves, or ruling on a point as to which the contending counsel had almost seemed ready to come to blows, seemed invariably to introduce an element of dignity. It was not as though he took the side of the lawyer who carried the point, but rather as if the lawyer had taken the side of eternal justice, and the Judge was there to show the harmony of the issue with that principle 'whose seat is the bosom of God.'

"The lawyers might be fiery or scorching in their sarcasm, or stormy in their wrath with one another, but the Judge seemed an incarnation of peace and civilized order.

"When Hunter sprang up and called the witness a liar, Judge Woodhull's tone was rather that of a mother quieting an unruly child than that of a severe magistrate rebuking an offender. It was full of sympathy, and yet uncompromisingly firm, so that the incident lasted only a few seconds.

"I can see at this distance, across the years, that his spirit was suffering from the strain, but he gave no token of it. He never seemed to forget himself or let himself go for a minute.

"Even at the close of a long and exciting day, his order to the officers to keep the doors closed and the spectators in their seats till the prisoner had been removed was as naturally spoken as if he had been making an observation on the weather, and without the slightest trace of impatience at the daily necessity of repetition.

"I remember Judge Woodhull thus because I have not seen anybody else measure up to this rare standard of modest dignity, conscientious justice, and unfailing courtesy in the years that have since gone."

In 1878 many of the legal fraternity urged upon Governor McClellan to re-nominate him for a third term, arguing that although a Republican he should retain the position which he had filled with such dignity and honor.

Notwithstanding this, the nomination was awarded to Ex-Governor Parker, and Judge Woodhull resumed the practice of law with his eldest son, John Tennent Woodhull.

During his eminently useful life, he held the position of Elder in three churches, the Old Tennent Church near Freehold, New Jersey; the Presbyterian Church at May's Landing, the Rev. Allen H. Brown being his close friend and pastor; and the Second Presbyterian Church of Camden, New Jersey, the Rev. Louis C. Baker, also his warm friend and pastor. He also served as Sunday-school Superintendent for some years in the latter church, and for one term was President of the Camden County Bible Society, in which he ever showed the deepest interest.

In him every good cause found an advocate, every down-trodden human being found a helpful friend.

Of his personal appearance one thus describes him:

"He was nearly six feet in height, gracefully formed, with large blue-grey sparkling eyes, erect of carriage and of a dignified easy manner."

He was the beloved companion and confidante of his children; a wise and loving counsellor to all who approached him. His strong manly character was most attractive; he was exceedingly fond of athletic sports, was a fine shot, an excellent swimmer, a prodigious walker, and a horseman of rare skill.

On March 4, 1881, after a brief illness, this strong man, with the heart of a child, having worn throughout his whole career, "the white flower of a blameless life," "gave up his pure soul unto his Captain Christ under whose colors he had fought so long."

The following eulogy was pronounced by Mr. Eugene Troth, a member of the Camden Bar, after his death:

"Judge Woodhull had so much magnetism about him, he was such an accessible man, so companionable, so congenial, so kind-hearted, yet he preserved great and becoming dignity of mind and character. His nature had no barren side, it was made up of the pure, the good, the loving, the tender and true.

"The elements were so mixed in this man, that the adamant and the angles which made up the vigor of his manhood lost none of their strength because they were hidden beneath the flowers of chivalric grace and esthetic culture."

He sleeps with many of his name, in the peaceful graveyard of the Old Tennent Church near Freehold, Monmouth County, New Jersey.

From the funeral discourse by the Rev. Louis C. Baker (afterward published as a memorial by the Camden Bar), is the following:

"In the 37th verse of the 37th Psalm it is written: 'Mark the perfect man and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace.'

"After an intimate acquaintance for many years with Judge Woodhull, I do not hesitate to say that these words seem to me to be a truer description of him than any other man I have ever known.

"As I looked upon his face not long after death—he seemed to lie before me like an old knight, who had fallen in battle indeed, but who in falling, had won the greatest of all victories, the victory over self and the world."

He left a widow, two daughters and four sons.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXXI.

William Wikoff Woodhull, (Ph. D.), seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the third son of John Tennent Woodhull, M. D., and Ann Wikoff. He was born July 28, 1817.

He was prepared for college by tutors at his father's home at Manalapan, Monmouth County, New Jersey, and entered the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University), at the age of thirteen, graduating at sixteen at the head of his class in 1833.

For a brief period he was a tutor in the college, and all his life was spent in imparting knowledge.

He was the head of a very successful Classical School in Freehold, New Jersey, for many years assisted by his brother Charles Frederick Woodhull, who was also a graduate of the College of New Jersey, and who later opened a Classical School for boys in Camden, New Jersey.

William Wikoff Woodhull was a man of superior intellect and attainments, but one whose retiring disposition deterred him from seeking the higher college position he could have filled so creditably.

He was a man of a deeply religious nature, a profound thinker and a gentleman of the old school. When a young man of thirty he wrote upon the subject of teaching as follows: (The quotation occurs in a letter written February 10, 1847, to the Rev. Allen H. Brown, then pastor of the May's Landing Presbyterian Church, Atlantic County, New Jersey.)

"I am glad to hear that you are turning your thoughts and efforts towards the furtherance of the cause of education throughout the Pines, and I verily believe that you give it its proper place when you rank it 'Next in importance to the promotion of religion.'

"I consider the office of the teacher second only to that of the preacher of the Gospel, and the longer I live, the more difficult it is for me to comprehend, why it is, that most people take so little interest in this matter, and are so regardless of the qualifications, and especially of the moral and religious character of those whom they employ to instruct their children."

In 1867 the degree of "Doctor of Philosophy" was conferred upon him by his Alma Mater.

In his later life Dr. Woodhull was for a time Head Master of the Trenton Academy; he also taught for several years in the Classical School of Professor George Eastman, in Philadelphia.

He married, April 6, 1852, Ellen Conover Wikoff, of Freehold, New Jersey. They had no children.

(See Genealogy, No. 314.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXXII.

Henry William Beck Woodhull, (M. D.), seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the only son of Gilbert Smith Woodhull, M. D., and Charlotte Wikoff. He was born at Manalapan, Monmouth County, New Jersey, October 3, 1819. He was graduated from the College of New Jersey in 1838, and after conducting for three years the paternal farm (a part of the estate of his grandfather), commenced the study of medicine in the City of New York and graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons there in 1845. He commenced the practice of his profession at New Brunswick, New Jersey, and on May 12th, 1847, married Azelia, youngest child of Joseph Giraud, a retired merchant of the City of New York, and a descendant of Pierre Giraud, a Huguenot refugee of 1685. Dr. Woodhull removed to the City of New York in 1854, and practiced there, in Long Island City, and in Brooklyn, removing to the last named place in 1879.

He was an enthusiastic, efficient, and popular staff-officer of the National Guard of the State of New York, holding a commission as surgeon of the Twelfth Regiment from 1855 to 1857, and as brigade-surgeon (with the rank of major) of the old Fourth Brigade, First Division, from 1857 to 1869.

As a physician, Dr. Woodhull was acute in diagnosis, skillful in therapeutics, and assiduous and devoted in his attention to his cases. While not without his preferences among the various departments of medicine and surgery, he resisted the tendency to sink into a specialty, and performed with ability and effectiveness the important and symmetrical functions of the general practitioner. In his intercourse with his patients, his manner was habitually cheerful, animating, and encouraging, and professional ability and personal influence were so combined in him that it was no uncommon thing for his patients to insist upon his services exclusively, even after they had removed to great distances.

He died at his home in the (then) City of Brooklyn, on January 20th, 1894.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXXIII.

Henry Isaac Woodhull, seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of Samuel Woodhull and Mary Ann Bull. He was born June 19, 1824.

In 1869 he joined his two brothers, Sereno Dwight and William Sturges, at Salt Lake City, Utah, where for two years before they had started a mining venture.

The three brothers opened an office, set up a mill and smelting works, and built a cabin up in the mountains, about twenty miles from Salt Lake City.

After their claim was staked out they employed about one hundred miners and other workmen, and started the mining business under the firm name of "Woodhull Brothers."

They sent out the first bullion ever produced in the State of Utah. It was taken from Gordon's Big Cottonwood Canyon. For a time they were greatly encouraged, but the venture was no easy one. All the ore had to be hauled by mule-team down the mountain and through the valleys for 20 miles to Salt Lake City.

The death of Henry Isaac Woodhull in August, 1870, in a great measure, broke up the enterprise, the two remaining brothers abandoning the work soon after.

Henry Isaac Woodhull was a man much respected and beloved, and his death was keenly felt among his friends. He was a man of Christian character, a kind and indulgent father, and a devoted husband. He was also a staunch Free-Mason.

He married, July 25, 1848, Mary W. Tyrrell. They had four children.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXXIV.

Merritt Smith Woodhull, seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the only child of Colonel Charles, and his wife Mary (or Polly) Woodhull. He was born August 16, 1824.

"During his boyhood and youth he was given good educational advantages, attending both the public schools and Miller's Academy.

"On attaining his majority Captain Woodhull went as a sailor on board a merchant vessel plying between New York and Liverpool, England, and later made two trips to China.

"Being a wide-awake, capable and reliable young man, he soon won promotion, and was given positions of great responsibility. He rose steadily, and for some time had command of a coasting steamer running between New York and Southern ports.

"He married, November 11, 1885, Mrs. Mary Jones (widow of Benjamin H. Jones). In 1890 he retired from the sea, having spent about forty-five years upon the water.

"In business affairs Captain Woodhull prospered, and after a useful and well spent life he passed away August 15, 1892.

"He was a man of the highest respectability, and those who were most intimately associated with him speak in unqualified terms of his sterling integrity, his honor in business, and his fidelity to all the duties of public and private life."

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXXV.

John Alpheus Woodhull, (Rev.), seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the third son of Richard Woodhull and Frances Greene. He was born October 30, 1825, near Lake Ronkonkoma, Suffolk County, Long Island.

We read of clergymen, whose sermons set the standard of English for the community in which they lived, as well as the standard of spiritual excellence; whose lives inspired every man in the parish to greater manliness and courage and awakened the interest in a broader world than the little eddying current of village life.

Ways and means never stood in the way of this type of clergyman, nor were they obstacles to his disciples. Barriers appeared only to be overcome; they were hazards, tests of strength only, and the man was he who surmounted the obstacles, not he who turned away and said "I was thwarted."

Such a clergyman was John Alpheus Woodhull, son of Richard Woodhull and one of ten children, born in an interesting old house near the shores of beautiful Lake Ronkonkoma, where the home place, with its heritage of fine old trees, was a portion of that original property of 10,800 acres purchased by his first American ancestor, Richard Wodhull, in 1665.

His mother was Frances Greene, of the Vermont family of Greenes, and not remotely connected with General Greene of Revolutionary fame.

From his earliest years, he evinced a strong character, an unusual sense of personal dignity, fastidious taste, and a gift of eloquence that was a source of amusement to his fun loving father, who when he found him delivering a long extemporaneous sermon to his astonished brothers called him "little parson" and declared "I shall send that boy to college."

When he was only nine years old, his father died and his young mother found that the property, that she had supposed large, was involved in debt and she was obliged to leave the large house for a smaller place and face, alone, the hard problem of bringing up the children on limited means.

After a period of living with distant relatives, he at length made his home with Deacon Joel Brown, of Rocky Point, twenty miles or more from his old home, but with a man famed for the beauty of his character and the lovableness of his spirit.

Into this home of plain living and high thinking, the young student came. He helped on the farm and walked through the picturesque woods to school. He was a reticent proud boy, with his own thoughts about life and the future.

From his father, he had learned the pride in his race but in the boy, it had early passed into a phase of idealism,—character was the measure of the man.

If he the descendant of kings and earls was without means and outward show of dignity, he might yet be of royal soul,—that no outward circumstance could touch. Material dignities, material obstacles were thus ignored, the life of the spirit usurped complete sway.

At the Academy, his reverence and enthusiastic admiration were stirred for Homer and Virgil, Theocritus and Horace, Demosthenes and Cicero, and he early became a good classical scholar.

He stored his mind with long passages from Shakespeare and Milton, Pope and Cowper, Thomson and Young, Burns and Wordsworth, and recited these in his long walks through the woods.

He wrote easily and was keen in debate. For mathematics, he cared little except for Geometry, that appealed to his imagination and his sense of beauty.

Before he entered Yale, he distinguished himself as a teacher who controlled by tact and force of personality, and interested his students by a variety of resource and keenness of wit.

At Yale College, he led a quiet student life, was sometimes quoted for his quaint humor and formed some life long friendships.

His health caused much anxiety and although he was absent months at a time, he succeeded in graduating with his class in 1850 and held creditable rank.

He had never felt any hesitation about his life work and the year after his graduation from Yale, he entered Bangor Theological Seminary. His independence of thought led him to adopt a custom of an earlier day in migrating from Seminary to Seminary, in pursuit of the professor best versed in a given subject.

In following this plan, he went from Bangor to Yale, and finally graduated at Auburn Theological Seminary in 1853. In July following, he was married to Joanna Brown whom he had known from childhood, and whose buoyancy of spirit and tenderness of devotion made sunshine in dark days of struggle with ill health; whose open-hearted hospitality and genial sympathy aided him in church work for thirty-four years; and whose unselfish spirit never faltered when life with an unpractical idealist and eight small children brought serious problems that must be practically solved.

In 1852, the Rev. John Alpheus Woodhull had been licensed to preach by the Long Island Congregational Association, but for two years after his graduation from Auburn, the frailty of his health prevented his taking a permanent charge.

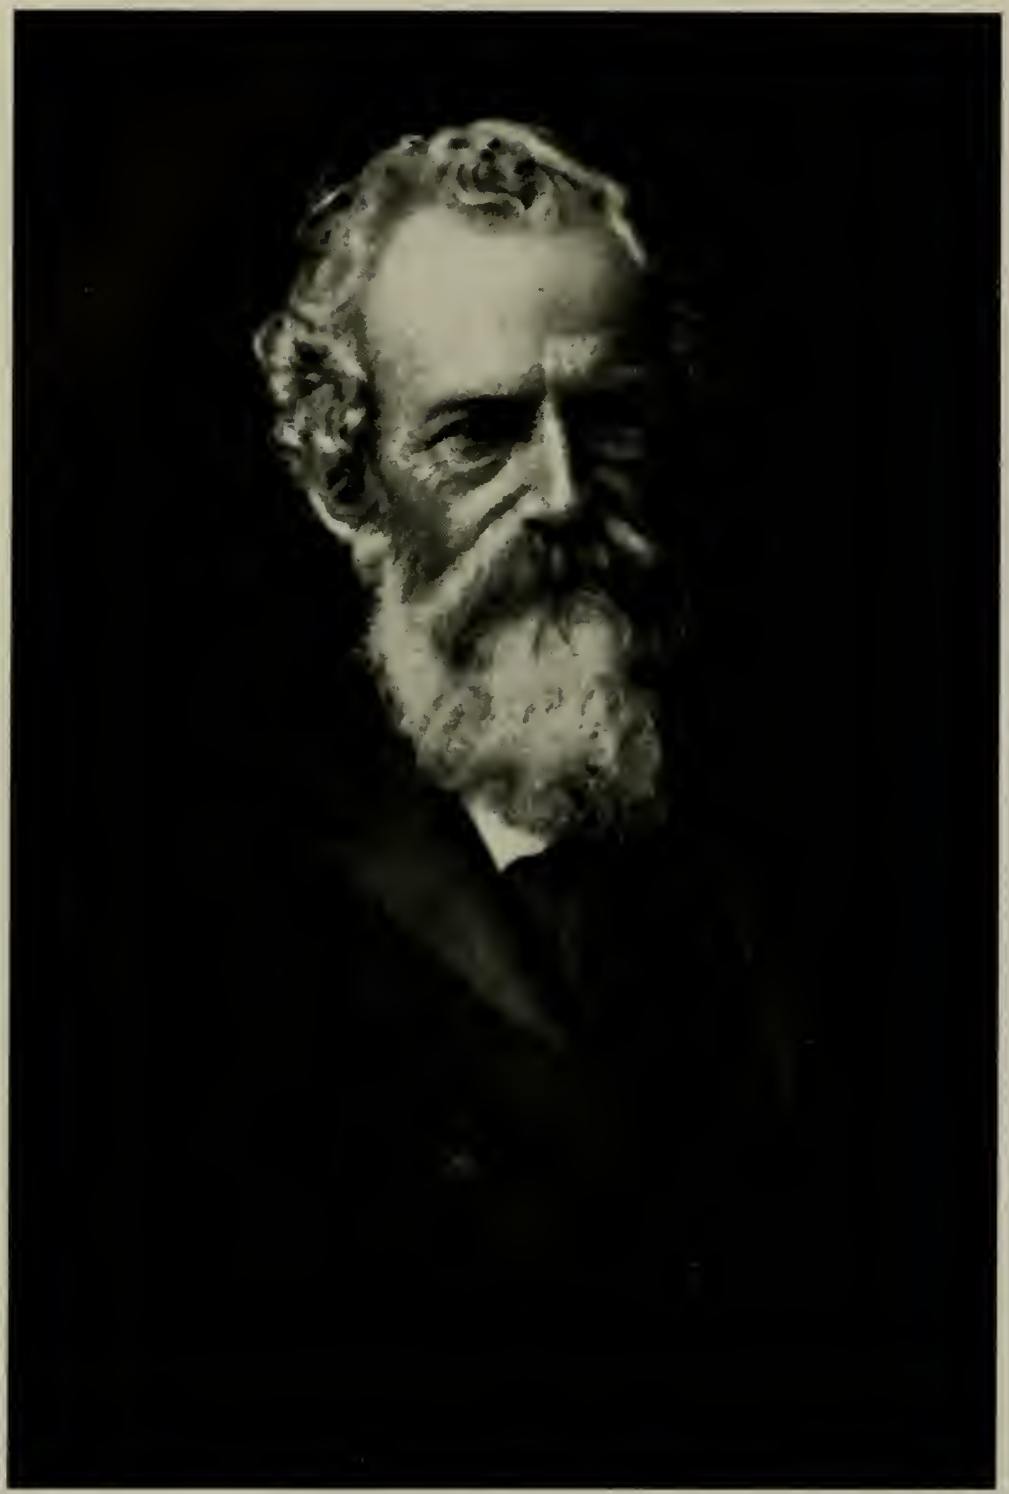
After preaching for a time at Union Center, New York, and at Freeport, New York, he was in 1856 ordained pastor of the Congregational Church at Wadham's Mills, Essex Co., New York, where he began his preaching in 1855. Two years later, he removed to New Village, in his native county, where on account of his outspoken views on the question of anti-slavery certain difficulties arose that led to his accepting the pastorate of the church at Commacs in the same county, where he remained for seven years, from 1859-1866.

The following three years were spent at Northville, also in Suffolk County, where he suffered from the dissensions of pro slavery members of the parish but overcame opposition by the dignity of his bearing and by tact.

Here he not only preached but started an Academy, for the better education of the older children and young people.

The next three years were spent as pastor of the First Congregational Church of New Boston, Connecticut, and in 1872 he removed to Groton, where he was installed December 24th, 1873.

He was Chairman of the School Board, and also became interested in the history of both the town and church, and wrote "A Review of



GILBERT TENNENT WOODHULL, D. D.

Biographical Sketch XXXVI.

Congregational Church History of Groton, Connecticut, with sketches of its ministers from 1704-1876."

For ten years, he was again in his native county, this time at Baiting Hollow. From here he removed to Middlefield, Massachusetts, where in 1887 he was called upon to bear the loss by death of his wife.

In 1889 he married Mrs. Eliza Miller Church and removed to Plainfield, Massachusetts, where he preached for seven years. Then after an active service in the Ministry of over forty years he retired and resided in Chicago until his death, February 1, 1902. He was interred beside his wife and two children in the historic Ledyard Cemetery, at Groton, Connecticut, where his widow has erected a substantial monument to his memory.

In the new stone church at Groton, is a window designed by Mr. Frederick Wilson, executed by Tiffany and given as a memorial to the Rev. John A. Woodhull, by his wife Eliza Miller Woodhull.

His life, like that of the parson in the Deserted Village, ran its unworldly course; of worldly ambition, he knew little, of the aspiration for all that was high and noble and beautiful, he knew much.

There was no community that was ever touched by his life that was not ennobled; young men went to college, libraries were started, public sentiment grew nobler and broader.

One of his parishioners quoted Chaucer's well known lines in characterizing the Rev. John Alpheus Woodhull, and I know of no more fitting summary with which to conclude this sketch.

"He waited after no pompe
ne reverence,
Ne maked him no spiced conscience,
But Cristes lore, and his apostles twelve,
He taught, but first he folwed
it himselve."

Of his children, four sons and one daughter survive him.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXXVI.

Gilbert Tennent Woodhull, (Rev.), (D. D.), seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was born February 18, 1827, at Manalapan, Monmouth Co., New Jersey.

He was the seventh son of John Tennent Woodhull, M. D., and Ann Wikoff. He attended the school taught by his brother William, later a noted classical teacher, and was by him prepared for college.

He was graduated from the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University), in 1852; and from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1855, and was appointed Tutor in Mathematics at Princeton which position he held from 1854 to 1855.

Two years were spent in South Jersey, as stated supply to the Congregation of May's Landing and Tuckahoe.

While on a visit to his friend and fellow-student, the Rev. Edwin R. Bower, who was pastor at Wappinger's Falls, New York, he preached to the neighboring congregation at Fishkill, whose pulpit was then vacant, the result being a call to the pastorate.

He was ordained and installed by the Presbytery of North River, on November 10, 1857, and was the faithful and beloved pastor of the small, scattered, but loyal congregation from 1857 to 1867.

Meanwhile, three of his College and Seminary fellow students, the Revs. Isaac N. Rendall, Lorenzo Westcott, and Edwin R. Bower had become Professors at Lincoln University, near Oxford, Chester Co., Penna., the first institution founded in the United States for the higher education of colored youth.

In 1869, the growth of the work demanded an additional professor and Mr. Woodhull's scholarship, character and general fitness for the position being brought before the Trustees by his college friends, an invitation was extended to, and accepted by him to become Professor of Greek and Latin.

Two years later a Professor of Latin was added to the Faculty, and Mr. Woodhull became Charles Avery Professor of Greek.

For two years he lived at Oxford four miles distant, and during that period it was his custom to ride on horseback to his classes.

Later, he and his family occupied the home near the University, which a quarter of a century's residence has associated with his name.

In 1881, Mr. Woodhull received the degree of Doctor of Divinity, from Princeton University, an honor of which he was eminently worthy.

He possessed great educational gifts and acquirements.

President Rendall, his friend and colleague of many years, speaks of him as a choice and very valuable man for their common work, by his faithful, quiet, steady, accurate instruction, his power of inducing thoroughness in study, and his influence upon the mental training of the students.

Order was kept in the class-room solely by his dignified presence, for here as elsewhere, appeared the peculiar and remarkable combination, for which Dr. Woodhull was justly noted, that of dignity, gravity, reserve and firmness together with uniform courtesy and gentleness.

His placid demeanor gained, from one class at least, the familiar name among themselves of "Moses."

Yet he could ask one who had made a specially unreasonable complaint concerning his grade, to hand it back that it might be reduced to its merits.

It was understood by the students that the Professor of Greek was not to be trifled with. On one occasion an unprepared student was "splashing about" in the effort to escape total failure in his poorly prepared recitation, when Dr. Woodhull exclaimed "Mr. ——— you can extemporize in English and perhaps also in Latin, but you can't extemporize in Greek."

His pupils admired and loved him, and liked to fancy that his study of Greek had made him classic in features, hair, attire and walk, and in every sentence of his sermons; and even declared that he talked Greek to his horse.

Outside of the class-room, the students proved his accessibility and personal kindness, feeling that they were welcomed in his study by a genuine friend, to whom they could unbosom their cares.

Like many of his race and name, he was a strong Republican, yet he took little part in political or civil affairs, although ever warmly attached to the best traditions of his party.

As a preacher he gave forth the utterance of a well informed theologian and an ardent believer; each sermon bore the marks of careful study, scholarly interpretation, decided conviction, spiritual experience, clear, ripe and well ordered thinking, sympathetic fidelity of application and notably cultured and chaste expression, while the delivery was with loving persuasion and impressiveness.

His preaching "day" always excited the glad expectation of pleasure and profit, and the students competed for the front seats.

His public prayers, it may be added, were reverent, spiritual and comprehensive, distinguished by simplicity and elevation of diction.

Dr. Woodhull regarded his labors at Lincoln as part of the missionary work of the Church. When the Mission Sabbath School, in the little village contiguous to the University, was at a low ebb he, with his eldest daughter, taking the feeble organization in hand, was the means of recovering the school.

He also established and carried on a preaching service, and brought the mission well forward toward its present issue in the village Chapel, now under the charge of the Presbyterian Congregation of Oxford.

Dr. Woodhull's only publication was an address in the Theological Department of the University, in September, 1885. It was entitled "The Importance and Responsibility of Ministerial Work," and was printed by request.

Notwithstanding his kindliness and affability, Dr. Woodhull was seldom seen in society. He loved better the privacy of his own home, where his bright, cheerful, uncomplaining spirit made him the idol of the household.

He was never known to lose control of his temper, while his consideration for others and his appreciation of anything done for himself were very marked.

He had a deep sense of humor and thoroughly enjoyed a joke at his own expense.

He was a noted horseman for many years, and a pedestrian as well, walking almost daily for exercise, usually accompanied by a favorite hunting dog.

He had a marked degree of muscular strength, and when near the age of three score and ten, he surprised his younger colleagues by raising himself up with his hands to the branch of a tree well overhead.

He was never in haste, on the contrary very deliberate, yet accurate and effective.

These qualities, and his renowned coolness and courage, came into play when he was the young pastor at Fishkill, when, revolver in hand, he stepped from the parsonage door and confronted a stalwart stranger clad in a long dark cloak and slouched hat.

Coolly pointing the revolver at the intruder in such a manner that the moonlight flashed across the ominous looking weapon, the young minister calmly ordered the intruder to turn round and make his way to the gate, which, followed by Mr. Woodhull, he obediently did, the raised weapon often meeting him when he ventured to pause and look back. The road reached, the man was dismissed with a warning.

Very different treatment was accorded the suppliant stranger. Two interesting cases were those of a runaway slave from the South, and a young French lad whose English was limited to the one word "work."

This helpless youth was taken into the Doctor's family, given employment, and taught to read and speak the English language. A French Bible was given to him, the first he had ever seen, having been brought up a Roman Catholic. Now grown to man's estate, this protégé is doing well and in the enjoyment of prosperity.

Though Dr. Woodhull had the courtly manners of the old school, it was without stiffness; such gracious dignity is rarely seen, and akin to this, another chief element in the universal esteem and affection that gathers about his memory: it was expressed at the time of his death in the tribute paid by the great poet in "In Memoriam" to the friend he mourned:

> "And thus he bore without abuse
> The good old name of Gentleman."

Other lines might be fitly applied to him from the same poem—addressed to one who also was a Professor of Greek, and whom the Lincoln Professor in many ways resembled:

> "And thou art worthy, full of power,
> As gentle, liberal-minded, great,
> Consistent, wearing all that weight
> Of learning lightly as a flower."

One of the letters of sympathy received by Mrs. Woodhull after her husband's death, was from his cousin, a surgeon and Colonel in the United States Army, at whose home in Princeton, New Jersey, in College and Seminary days, the subject of this sketch had been "a frequent and welcome visitor."

It is thus Colonel Woodhull wrote of him: "I know that his record has constantly been just such as one would desire for efficiency and for reputation—a life of intelligence and culture, tending in the words so conspicuous at Princeton, to 'the advancement of sound learning and true religion.'"

"True religion" was the source and strength of the life and character thus briefly sketched. She who knew him best writes that "it was his habit for many years to rise early each morning for the purpose of uninterrupted meditation and prayer in the privacy of his study. As it was said of Enoch, 'he walked with God.'"

Dr. Woodhull rested from his labors on February 11, 1898. During his brief illness he was able to talk little, but he "held fast the beginning of his confidence steadfast unto the end" and among his last words were "Oh, Jesus loves me," and "All is well."

Funeral addresses were made by the Rev. Isaac N. Rendall, D. D., President of Lincoln University, his colleague for twenty-nine years, and the Rev. William R. Bingham, D. D., President of the Board of Trustees. He was buried at Oxford beside a much loved and mourned little son.

Gilbert Tennent Woodhull married, May 14, 1862, Elizabeth, daughter of William Besley Waldo and Jane Ann Bruce, of New York City.

Mrs. Woodhull was descended in the eighth generation from Cornelius Waldo, of Chelmsford, Mass., who died in the year 1700.

Dr. Woodhull was survived by his widow, one son and four daughters.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXXVII.

George Spofford Woodhull, (D. D.), seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the youngest son of William Woodhull and Phebe Carl. He was born July 25, 1829.

He was graduated from New York University in 1848, with the Greek Honor, and from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1852, and was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of New York the same year.

He was ordained as an Evangelist by the Presbytery of West Jersey, 1853. Was Chaplain United States Army, 4th Virginia Infantry (then Chaplain of the 4th West Virginia Infantry when West Virginia was admitted into the Union in 1863), from 1861 to 1864.

Was pastor for many years of the Presbyterian Church at Point Pleasant, Mason County, Virginia (now a part of West Virginia), and later pastor at Marinette, Wisconsin, also at some other churches served for shorter periods, and finally at Saginaw, Michigan.

The Rev. George S. Woodhull had the Honorary Degree of D. D., or S. T. D., conferred upon him by New York University. At the age of seventy Dr. Woodhull was honorably retired (H. R.), by the Presbytery of Flint, Michigan.

He was married, October 25, 1855, to Elizabeth D., daughter of Moses Martin, of Peacham, Vermont. They had five children, of whom two are living (1904).

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXXVIII.

Addison Waddell Woodhull, (M. D.), seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the youngest son of John Woodhull, M. D., and Ann Wikoff.

He was born at Manalapan, Monmouth County, New Jersey, August 13, 1831, and was graduated from the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University), in 1854.

He subsequently studied medicine under his father's direction and under those famous physicians, Valentine Mott and VanBuren, and in 1856, received from the New York Medical University the degree of M. D., with the highest honors.

He was soon after appointed physician to the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island and performed the duties of that office for one year.

In 1857, he removed to Newark, N. J., and there established himself in the practice of his profession, which he left at the commencement of the war of the Rebellion, responded to his country's call and accepted the appointment of Assistant Surgeon of the Fifth New Jersey Volunteers. In this connection he remained until February 6th, 1862, when he was promoted Surgeon of the Ninth Regiment.

In the fall of the same year he was appointed surgeon-in-charge of the Hammond General Hospital, at Beaufort, where he remained until he was again called into the field by the departure of General Heckman for South Carolina, when he was made surgeon of Heckman's Star Brigade.

He superintended the erection of the Mansfield General Hospital at Morehead City, North Carolina, which was pronounced a model institution of its kind.

He was with Burnside and with Rosecrans, and was also with Sherman during the latter part of his memorable journey to the sea; was wounded twice, one ball disabling an arm, another, which was never extracted, breaking one of his ribs.

At the close of the war, Dr. Woodhull returned to Newark to resume his practice and met with a hearty welcome.

He was made President of the District Medical Society of Essex County, also of the Newark Medical Association, was one of the staff of physicians of St. Michael's Hospital, member of the Board of Examiners for Pensions and Medical Examiner of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company.

He was a ruling elder and prominent member of the South Park Presbyterian Church, the pastor of which, the Rev. James P. Wilson, D. D., was his close friend.

Dr. Woodhull married, November 23, 1859, Emma Taylor Ellis, daughter of Daniel H. Ellis and Catherine Ann Holmes, of Freehold, New Jersey.

He died at his home, Newark, N. J., May 14th, 1876, after a short illness, and was buried in the Old Tennent Church-yard.

Dr. Woodhull left a widow, three sons and a daughter.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XXXIX.

William Waters Woodhull, (Pay Inspector United States Navy), seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the second son of Ezra Reeves Woodhull and Elizabeth Waters.

He was born June 15, 1836. His early education was received in Philadelphia, where he later married.

He entered the Navy May 13, 1863, and served with distinction until its close, and since that time has done duty on every important foreign station and on most of those of the home stations.

His first service was on the gunboat "Delaware" in the Sounds of North Carolina, under Rear Admiral S. P. Lee.

In 1864, he was in the fleet on the James River that supported General Butler in his advance on Richmond, and continued in that service until the evacuation. The "Delaware" was constantly at the front, and was one of the vessels that protected the constructors of the Dutch Gap Canal, and was the first vessel to enter Richmond after the evacuation. Later the "Delaware" was transferred to the Potomac Flotilla, and was one of the vessels assigned to patrol the river in search of Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln.

His first sea service, after the Civil War, was in the U. S. S. "Yantic" in 1867, when that vessel was sent to Tampico to receive and protect Emperor Maximilian, but which was unfortunately too late, as he was shot by his captors before the "Yantic" arrived.

In 1869 he was detailed to the "Miantonomah" when she was sent to Portland, Me., with the fleet of Monitors to receive from England the remains of Peabody, from the British battleship "Monarch," which brought the body of that distinguished patriot to this country. Admiral Farragut was in command, and this was his last duty, as he died a few months later.

From 1870 to 1873 William Waters Woodhull was attached to the sloop-of-war "Shenandoah" on the European Station, and during the Franco-Prussian war was stationed at Havre under orders of the American Minister, Hon. E. B. Washburn. The officers were among the first to visit Paris after the siege where they were very hospitably entertained by the Minister. The "Shenandoah" visited all the principal ports in the north of Europe and in the Mediterranean, going as far East as the Holy Land.

From 1877 to 1879 he was in charge of the Naval Depot at Nagasaki, Japan, and Purchasing Officer of the China Station.

From 1881 to 1884 served on the "Lackawanna" in the South Pacific. It was this vessel that conveyed Messrs. Trescott and Blaine, Peace Commissioners to Chili, from Panama to Valparaiso in 1882. In 1883 the "Lackawanna" was sent to Honolulu to take part, with ships of other nations, in the coronation of Kalakaua as King of the Hawaiian Islands.

From 1890 to 1893 he was attached to the cruiser "Baltimore," commanded by Captain Schley, which vessel carried the remains of Ericsson, the Swedish inventor of the monitor, from New York to Stockholm, and later was attached to the European Squadron. While in Stockholm the King visited the ship, and entertained the officers at dinner at the palace. They were also very hospitably entertained by the Kings of Denmark and Portugal at Copenhagen and Lisbon, and by Prince Henry of Prussia at Kiel. In the spring of 1891, the "Baltimore" was sent to Valparaiso to protect American interests during the war in Chili. After the close of the war the ship cruised in the northern Pacific, going as far as Puget Sound, and in 1893 returned to New York as Flag-ship of a Special Squadron, commanded by Rear Admiral Gherardi, stopping, en route, at ports of the various countries on the Pacific Coast to extend invitations to them to participate in celebrating the 200th anniversary of the Landing of Columbus.

In 1898 he was detailed to the supply steamer "Celtic" as Commissary to the Blockading Squadron off Santiago during the Spanish-American War, and after the war was sent to San Juan, Porto Rico, to assist in establishing a Naval Station on that island.

During the intervals between cruises he served at nearly all the Navy Yards and Stations on the Atlantic coast, and at Mare Island, California. He was retired June 15, 1898.

He married, June 24, 1862, Kate Oatly Bryan. They had two children, a son and daughter, both of whom are married.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XL.

Alfred Alexander Woodhull, (M. D.), (Colonel United States Army, Retired), eighth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the only child of Alfred Alexander Woodhull, M. D., and Anna Maria Salomons.

He was born at Princeton, New Jersey, April 13, 1837.

ALFRED ALEXANDER WOODHULL, Colonel, M. D.

Biographical Sketch XL.

He prepared at Lawrenceville, New Jersey, for Princeton College, from which he was graduated A. B., in 1856; and received from the same institution the degrees of A. M., 1859, and LL. D., in 1894.

He commenced the study of Medicine in 1856, under the preceptorship of Dr. John Stillwell Schanck, Professor of Chemistry in Princeton College; attended two courses of lectures at the University of Pennsylvania, Department of Medicine, and was graduated M. D., in March, 1859.

In the following July, Dr. Woodhull commenced the practice of Medicine in Leavenworth, Kansas, but after a few weeks he removed to Eudora in the same State, where he practiced two years.

After Sumter was fired upon, he took an active part in raising a Company of mounted rifles for the Kansas Militia, with a view to service, and was commissioned a lieutenant therein.

In September, 1861, upon the usual competitive examination, he was commissioned a medical officer in the regular army.

His service during the war was with troops and as assistant to medical directors, and included duty as acting medical inspector of the Army of the James, 1864-'65; in March, 1865, he was brevetted lieutenant-colonel and the intermediate grades of Captain and Major, for "faithful and meritorious services during the war," and attained the actual rank of lieutenant-colonel May 16th, 1894.

He became a Colonel in the Medical Department (an Assistant Surgeon General) October 8, 1900, and by the operation of law passed to the retired list as Colonel United States Army, April 13, 1901.

He represented the Medical Department of the United States Army at the Eighth International Congress of Hygiene and Demography, London, 1891; was instructor in Military Hygiene at the Infantry and Cavalry School, Fort Leavenworth, 1886-'90; was commanding officer of the Army and Navy General Hospital, Hot Springs, Arkansas, from March 26, 1892, to July, 1895; Medical Director, Department of Colorado, from July, 1895, to July, 1898; organized and commanded the Josiah Simpson General Hospital, near Fort Monroe, Va., August, 1898, to February, 1899; Chief Surgeon Department of the Pacific (that is, administration medical officer of the Philippines) April-December, 1899.

In charge of the Library and Museum Division, Surgeon General's office, April 1900, to April, 1901; President Medical Examining Board, Winter and Spring 1901.

He is a gold medalist of the Military Service Institution, for a prize essay on "The Enlisted Soldier," published in its Journal, March, 1887.

His literary work includes the "Catalogue of the Surgical Section of the Army Medical Museum," 1867; "Studies, chiefly Clinical, in the Non-Emetic Use of Ipecacuanha," 1876; "Notes on Military Hygiene, for Officers of the Line," 1890; 2nd, edition, 1898.

The article on Military Hygiene in the Reference Hand-Book of the Medical Sciences, first edition, Vol. III., second edition Vol. IV.;

"On the Causes of the Epidemic of Yellow-Fever at Savannah, 1876," American Journal of the Medical Sciences, July, 1877; "May not Yellow-Fever Originate in the United States?" Transactions of the American Public Health Association, 1879; "The Sanitary Relations of Military Sites" in the Division of Military Engineering of the International Congress of Engineers, Chicago, 1893; and a report to the War Department of "Observations on the Medical Department of the British Army," published in the Transactions of the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States, Vol. IV., 1894; and other professional and literary occasional papers.

Colonel Woodhull is the eighth in descent from Richard Wodhull, the patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, and by other lines is descended from a Signer of the Declaration (John Witherspoon, D. D.), and from a Colonel in the active New Jersey Militia in the Revolution. Besides being a signer, Dr. Witherspoon pleaded for Independence "like a Cicero." He was also an active and very efficient member of the Board of War and in 1778 a member of the committee upon finance with Robert Morris, Elbridge Gerry, Richard Henry Lee and Gouverneur Morris.

Colonel Woodhull resides at Princeton, and is a lecturer in the University on Personal Hygiene and Public Sanitation. He married, December 15, 1868, Margaret, daughter of Elias Ellicott, of Baltimore. He was commissioned Brigadier-General, retired, April 23, 1904. They had no children.

(See Genealogy, No. 572.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XLI.

Aaron McCracken Woodhull, seventh generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of Stephen Woodhull and Experience McCracken. He was born October 1, 1837.

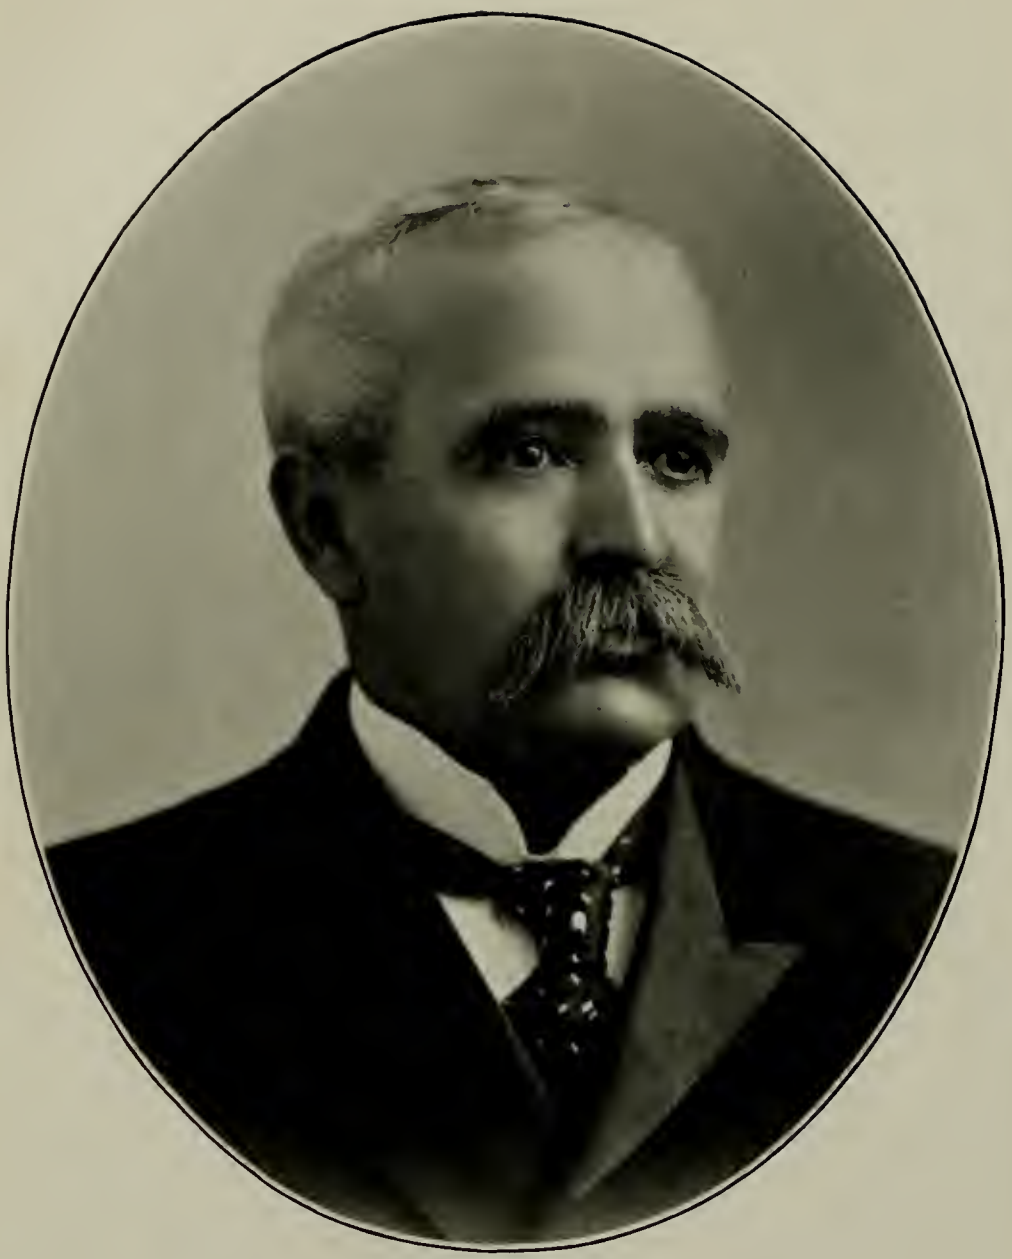
He prepared for college at Cazenovia Seminary, New York, and was graduated from Hamilton College, Clinton, New York, in 1861.

He entered the Army as 1st Lieutenant in "Cobb's Maryland Cavalry," and served until 1865.

After the Civil War he returned to his old home at Madison, New York, where in 1866, he purchased the family homestead, and resided there until 1872, when he removed to Missouri.

He had a fine dairy-farm of four hundred and fifty acres, and one hundred head of fine bred Jerseys. He started the first Creamery in the State and made gilt-edged butter for private customers in St. Louis.

For a number of years he took a deep interest in the Sunday School work of the State, and during much of this time was President of the County Sunday School Association.



OLIVER JONES WOODHULL.

Biographical Sketch XLV.

In 1898, he removed to St. Louis, since which time he has filled the positions of President and Vice-President of the "Ross-Keller Brick Machine Company."

He married, February 12, 1868, Sarah Jane Curtis, of New York State, and has two married daughters and a son.

(See Genealogy, No. 395.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XLII.

Addis Emmet Woodhull, eighth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the second son of Richard William Woodhull and Ruth A. Strong. He was born at Blooming Grove, Orange County, New York, September 11, 1840.

His education was received at Blooming Grove, in which place he resided until 1861. During this same year he went to New York City, where he enlisted in the Ninth New York Militia, and on the 31st, of May, 1861, he started for the front. After serving as a private for six months he was promoted Captain of Company "D" of the Sixteenth New York Volunteers, raised at Plattsburg, Clinton County, New York, serving in this capacity through the Peninsular Campaign under McClellan. His next promotion was that of Lieutenant-Colonel of the same regiment.

Upon retiring from the Army, he went West to Valparaiso, Indiana, engaging in the lumber, and later in mercantile business, and in 1864 married Eliza Jane, daughter of Thomas A. E. Campbell and Margaret Parkinson, of Valparaiso.

Conducting his lumber and mercantile business until 1874, Mr. Woodhull embarked in the butter and cheese business, establishing factories throughout Northern Indiana, and entered very extensively into the commission business, establishing the main house in Chicago, and branch houses in New York City, and Liverpool, England.

In May, 1898, retiring from active business life, he was elected Mayor of Valparaiso, and served as such, until he removed his residence to Chicago in 1902.

Mr. Woodhull has seven children, six daughters and a son, all of whom are living, five daughters being married.

(See Genealogy, No. 668.)

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH XLIII.

Maxwell Van Zandt Woodhull, (Brevet Brigadier General U. S. Volunteers), eighth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the eldest son of Captain Maxwell Woodhull, U. S. N., and Ellen Francis Poor.

He was born in Washington, D. C., September 17, 1843, and received his education in the same city, and at Miami University.

He entered the United States Army with the rank of Captain and Aide de Camp, December 22, 1862, and was promoted to be Major and Assistant Adjutant General, June 30, 1864, to Lieutenant Colonel and Assistant Adjutant General of the 15th Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, February 17, 1865.

Brevetted Colonel "for faithful and meritorious services during the campaign," and brevetted Brigadier General for faithful services during the war, March 13, 1865.

He also served as Second Secretary of Legation at London, May, 1871, resigned June, 1872. He also served as Head of Division in the Consular Bureau.

He is still living and unmarried.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH LI.

George Edmund Woodhull, (Rev.), eighth generation from Richard Wodhull I., Patentee of Brookhaven, Long Island, was the second son of the Rev. George Spofford Woodhull, D. D., and Elizabeth D. Martin. He was born at Point Pleasant, West Virginia, October 17, 1860.

He graduated M. A. from Princeton University June, 1884; and from Princeton Theological Seminary, May, 1887.

From 1887 to 1888 he was Home Missionary at West Plains, Missouri. March 19, 1888, he was commissioned as a Foreign Missionary to Japan by the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions.

He married at West Plains, Missouri, June 7, 1888, Lillie May, daughter of Edward Johnson.

He was ordained as a Minister of the Gospel by the Presbytery of New York, September 30, 1888.

He arrived in Osaka, Japan, October of the same year, and took up the work nearest his heart, that of preaching the gospel to the people of Japan; which work he continued with enthusiasm and joy, until his death at Tokyo, October 11, 1895.

A Memorial Service was held by the West Japan Mission during its annual meeting at Kyoto, November, 1895.

To the father of the deceased, the Secretary wrote as follows:

"Your son was a beloved and highly honored member of this body. Many were the tributes made to his kindness, unselfishness, zeal and success in his work. No man was ever more sincerely mourned."

A Japanese pastor, the Rev. Mr. Wada, said of him, "Many words which I heard him speak years ago in Osaka, are still sounding in my ears. Many Japanese friends to-day join with his family and foreign friends in lamenting his sad and untimely death."

In him the West Japan Mission lost one of its most earnest and successful workers.

He left a widow, two daughters and a son.
